OUTSPOKEN CHALLENGE BY HON. MR. BRUCE

Under-Consumption the Prime Cause of the World Crisis

AGAINST PLANS FOR RESTRICTION

SENATOR PITTMAN AS CHAIRMAN OF SILVER COMMITTEE

WORLD CONFERENCE DISCUSSION

AN OUTSPOKEN CRITICISM OF PROPOSALS FOR REDUCING THE PRODUCTION OF COMMODITIES WAS VOICED BY THE HON. STANLEY BRUCE AT THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE YESTERDAY.

Mr. Bruce denied that over-production was responsible for the world crisis and argued that the true solution was to be found in increasing consumption by increasing purchasing power.

KING FEISAL IN LONDON

COLOURFUL SCENES IN STATE VISIT

GREETED BY HIS MAJESTY

London, June 20.

King Feisal of Iraq was given a notable reception when he reached England on a State visit to-day.

As his steamer, escorted by four of Britain's fastest destroyers and nine aeroplanes, entered Dover Harbour, a Royal Salute of twenty-one guns was fired.

The King's second son, the Duke of York, with the Iraq Minister, went aboard to greet the king and introduced to him the British suite which has been attached to him for the visit and accompanied him to the special train on which he proceeded to London.

Awaiting the Royal visitor at Victoria Station were King George, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Gloucester, the Prime Minister and other members of the Cabinet, heads of the Services and many other distinguished people who wore either uniform or levee dress.

GRENADIERS PARADE.

The Grenadier Guards, with the King's Colour, formed the Guard of Honour and helped to create an impression of pageantry which has not been equalled in London for some time.

There was a cordial greeting between the two Kings and numerous introductions were made on both sides before the procession of carriages in the first of which sat King Feisal and King George, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Gloucester, proceeded to Buckingham Palace through large crowds which heartily cheered the Royal visitor.—British Wireless.

LAST NIGHT'S STORM

HEAVY RAIN, BUT FOR A SHORT TIME

Although last night's thunderstorm appeared to bring with it extremely heavy rain, the readings at the Royal Observatory show that between 10 p.m. and 11 p.m. the fall was .289 inch, most of it within a very short time, and between 11 p.m. and midnight a further .225 inch was added.

The total in the 24 hours ended at 10.30 a.m. was .79 inch.

GERMAN SHIPPING LOSSES

H.-A.L. AND N.D.L. DEFICIT

Total losses amounting to 26,000,000 marks were suffered by the Hamburg-Amerika and Norddeutscher Lloyd companies during 1932. The companies have agreed to share the losses.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN ON BANK POLICY

London, June 20.

At the Conference to-day, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Chamberlain, speaking in the sub-committee of the monetary commission which is considering immediate measures for dealing with the world trade depression, declared that cheap money was indispensable for trade recovery and urged the banks of world to reveal their money policy for trade and industry.

He recalled that since October, 1929, wholesale commodity prices, expressed in gold, had declined one third and raw material prices from fifty to sixty per cent.

POSITION OF TRADERS.

As long as traders thought prices were going to be still worse they would not embark on business operations. Therefore any action which has the flavour of deflation on the part of the central banks would be extremely injurious.

"We attach importance to the suggestion that the intentions of the banks should be stated so that all the world may know the purpose and the policy which they intend to pursue. We are not to regard a cheap monetary policy as constituting by itself a remedy for all the evils that inflict the world. But cheap money in the financial centres is the indispensable background against which the economic recovery of the world can take place.

Dear money, or even in the present conditions moderately dear money, is a handicap to world recovery.

CO-ORDINATION.

"I want to emphasise the extreme desirability of co-ordination in credit policy between the central banks. If those banks opposite directions or even if pursue policies which lead in they adopt different methods in trying to achieve the same end we shall not secure what we want."

He added that governments should see that their central banks had the powers required to preserve an open credit policy.

GOLD STANDARD.

The Second monetary sub-commission, after some discussion, adopted unanimously the first two points in the United States resolution, namely, "that it is in the interests of all that stability in the international monetary field should be attained as quickly as possible and that gold should be re-established as an international measure of exchange values."

An addition, proposed by Lord Hailsham, that each country should be free to determine the time and the parity at which it should return to the gold standard was also accepted.

SILVER QUESTION.

A sub-committee to deal with the silver question, over which Senator Pittman will preside, was also set up.

During the sitting of the economic commission, where the general discussion was mainly devoted to the subject of what the Australian Minister Resident in London Mr. Stanley Bruce, said Australia felt was the great object of the conference namely to increase world purchasing power and, as far as possible, avoid the remedy of a reduced would production.

"Restriction of production seems to us to be a terrible policy to accept," he said.

"We in Australia have great obligations to the world to develop a great continent and to utilise all our resources for the benefit of mankind."

THE COMMON GOOD.

It had been suggested many times, said Mr. Bruce, that the trouble was that the primary industries of overseas countries had increased their production and disorganised the world markets.

That would not bear examination. There had been an increasing obstruction of European markets by an ever-rising tide of protection for European agriculture. The result of the quotas imposed had been to stimulate in England production as well as to raise prices. This was an inter-

GERMAN DELEGATES WALK OUT

NO EFFORT MADE TO STOP THEM.

London, June 20.

The German delegation to the International Labour Conference has withdrawn.

No steps were taken by the Bureau to prevent their departure or to find a compromise. It is the view of the Bureau that no affront of any kind was offered to the delegation.

Dr. Ley accompanied by his colleagues left for Berlin in the evening.—Reuter.

AMERICA'S TRADE OFFICES

DRASTIC ECONOMY MEASURES

The order from Washington which effected the closure of the American Trade Commissioner's Office in Hongkong has also had drastic effect in England and on the Continent.

It is understood that the London office will be reduced from the present staff of eleven men to but two, while the staff of 25 at Berlin will be cut to about half.

It is further learned that at least 24 members of offices on the Continent will likewise be recalled.

The men returning from London have been ordered to leave immediately or by July 1 at the latest.

The position in which the recalled men will find themselves when they return to Washington is unknown.

It is now stated that the projected aerial service connecting Shanghai and Canton will be formally inaugurated in August, while special test flights will be made sometime this month. The two stopping-places will be located at Wenchow and Amoy.

At the moment, according to the report, no definite arrangement has been made for continuing the service to Hongkong, although this is contemplated by the promoters.

The subject is believed to be under discussion with the Hongkong Government.

Final details as to schedule will be determined upon the results of the test flights, although it is hoped to shorten the time between Shanghai and Hongkong to between five and six hours.—Special.

HEAT WAVE HITS MIDDLE WEST

DAMAGE TO CROPS REPORTED

New York, June 20.

Reports of damage to crops owing to the intense heat wave in the Middle West caused a break on the New York Stock Exchange to-day.

In the morning, with the dollar showing a record depreciation level, prices jumped in all sections of the market, but later heavy profit-taking and short-selling caused a slump and prices eased off to lower than the opening rates.—Swan, Culbertson and Fritz.

ANGLO-DANISH TRADE

London, June 20.

Ratifications of the Anglo-Danish trade agreement were exchanged at Copenhagen to-day between the Danish Premier and Mr. Hugh Gurney, the British Minister. The Agreement enters into force immediately.—British Wireless.

GREAT BRITAIN AND SILVER

GOVERNMENT URGED TO ACT.

The monetary committee of the Federation of British Industries—an organisation representative of all the leading firms in the country—passed an important resolution to-day, urging the British Government to give every encouragement to any practical proposals to raise the value of silver in relation to gold and to promote the stabilisation to silver.—Reuter.

BRITAIN WIN ALL FIVE

CLEAR CUT WIN IN DAVIS CUP

London, June 20.

As anticipated, Great Britain to-day at Eastbourne, won the remainder of their matches against Czecho-Slovakia in the semi-final of the European Zone of the Davis Cup, making a clean sweep of the five rubbers.

Fred Perry did not linger to admire the scenery in disposing of Hecht. He beat the visitor in straight sets 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, and was so completely the master, that he won his points just whenever he thought fit.

H. W. Austin followed this up by gaining a clear cut victory over Menzel, although the loser managed to obtain one set.

In fact the Englishman had all his work cut out in the first two sets. He lost the opening stanza 6-3, and had to fight his hardest to save the second at 9-7. Thereafter Menzel faded from the picture and went out to win at 6-1, 6-1.—Reuter.

VERSAILLES PACT ANNIVERSARY

GERMANY TO FLY FLAGS AT HALF MAST

At the suggestion of the German Government, flags will be flown at half mast on all public buildings throughout Germany on June 28, the anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Versailles.

National organisations are planning to hold meetings and demonstrations, while special lessons on the significance of the day will be given in all schools.

Suffering from injuries caused when he fell through a fanlight from the top to the lower floor at 120, Temple Street, yesterday, Tse Tsong-mui, aged 24, was admitted to the Kwong Wah Hospital yesterday in a serious condition.

T. V. SOONG'S ACTIVITY

DISCUSSIONS ON FAR EAST

VISITING OTHER CAPITALS

Paris, June 20.

It is understood that M. Paul Boncour and Mr. T. V. Soong had a general talk on the Far Eastern situation, Mr. Soong explaining his view to the French Government. There was no question of his asking for a loan.

It is believed that Mr. Soong intends similar visits to other European governments, although no special importance is attached to the interview and it is emphasised that Mr. Soong is returning to London on Thursday to lunch with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.

DETAIL WORK.

Mr. Soong is leaving the detail work of the Chinese delegation to the World Economic Conference to other members of the contingent, leaving him free to undertake exchanges of views with the representatives of other Powers on the Far Eastern situation and also, it is believed, discussing proposals by which his offer, during the plenary session, of China as the key to a solution of the world crisis, might be acted upon.

In an interview in Paris to-day, Mr. Soong told Reuter that he was visiting the French capital to pay his respects officially to the head of the French Government and the Minister for Foreign Affairs following an invitation from the French Government which he received while he was in the United States.

VISITING OTHER CAPITALS.

Later, in the same way, he will be visiting Rome, Berlin and Geneva.

While he proposes to take advantage of the opportunity to establish direct contact with the heads of the leading European governments, he had no particular subject to bring before the French ministers.

They had been exchanging views on the Far Eastern situation generally. He was not trying to raise any further loans.

"HAVE TO BE SATISFIED.

Asked whether he was satisfied with his talks with M. Paul-Boncour, Mr. Soong replied: "Of course. I have to be satisfied!"

Mr. Soong is seeing M. Daladier again to-morrow and apparently it is not quite certain whether he will leave for London to-morrow. —Reuter.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

FOR THE SUPPER PARTY

Grey Organza in Lovely Moulded Lines Makes This Stylish Triple-Service Costume

By Joan Savoy

So-called "garden party clothes" always intrigue women, even though so few ever get to garden parties.

Supper dresses are much more in tune with American life as it is lived to-day. And approximately the same type of pretty, feminine thing is suitable both for Sunday suppers and garden parties. Top the dress with a big hat, and there you are!

If you feel it in your bones that you are going to be asked out a lot, or will have to entertain a lot, or perhaps go to several stylish weddings, then you'll need type of costume.

One particularly good supper dress is made of grey organza, with lovely moulded lines, over a grey satin slip. It has long, tight organza sleeves, making it quite the right thing for dinner parties, too.

The smart new feature is the fichu made with ruffly edges that give the desired wide-shouldered effect, then taper to a point at high waistline and the ends cross to girdle the dress and fasten in the back.

Where the fichu meets at the V neck, there is a handsome red and rhinestone pin, an effective touch of colour against the moonglow organza.

FASHION NOTES

(From A Paris Correspondent)

The ensemble idea is still prominent, but shows frequently combinations of two materials, print and plain fabrics, or two colours, rather than entirely matching. Many of the new gowns shown have an accompanying coat.

A general feature of the new mode is the concentration of interest in the backs of the models this applying especially to skirts.

Draperies reminiscent of the bustle are quite frequently attempted. Skirts often concentrate their fullness in the back.

For evening wear some are finished with what might be called rudimentary trains. Most women are probably tired of the broad-shouldered line and this, I think, has gone more or less into oblivion. Women this season want to be more feminine.

Pockets are patched on the sports suits, and the sports dress, as many as four to a garment, sometimes, and almost always two.

Sports suits look to their buttons or metal clips for practically the sole means of ornamentation.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

A mother has asked me about stammering. She is greatly distressed about her three-year-old boy who looks up at her so pitifully after an attempt at words and says, "Mother, I can't talk."

She despairs of curing him because it runs in the family, and asks me if I can give her any advice that will help ever so little.

What can I say, what can I do, except give the general information about plenty of rest, plenty of fresh air, not too much excitement, and a great deal of happiness? Of course, she has heard all this before. And, she has heard, too, that many children during their adventurous fourth year (after three) begin to stammer because their excited thoughts get ahead of their tongues. Naturally they get over it in time unless the habit is deepened and set by perpetual reference to it in the family.

Seek Able Advice

I read a treatise on stammering not long ago and when I was through I had learned something about glands, nerves, and co-ordination, but was not one step ahead of where I started as far as cure was concerned.

There are research centres where cures are being studied and worked out with more or less success. There are people who go about and conduct classes for stammerers who do much good. Whether they work permanent cures or not I cannot say.

If I had a child whom I felt was in for a life of inhibited speech, I should write to the medical centre of the nearest large city, and get first-hand advice about whom to consult. Such a course might result in treatment at a hospital, or merely in a course of procedure at home to be carried out patiently.

Spare Child Embarrassment

But I first would be sure that it was right advice and not too experimental, and that it was in the hands of a doctor who really knew all that can be known about this perplexing affliction.

One thing I should do, having this in my family. That is to prevent the little soul from seeing how unhappy and worried I was about it. I would campaign among my friends and his playmates to treat it as a matter of course and not add self-consciousness and embarrassment to make him still more unhappy.

I should have him accept it as a matter of course. As tactfully and carefully as I could I would have him speak slowly. Many children outgrow it. They do so more quickly if they are not reminded of it. And they must not see that their parents are distressed.

There Are Worse Afflictions

It is a cross to bear, I know, but after my visit to a large Children's Hospital three days ago, where so many of the little sufferers will never be out of bed, or will go through life hopelessly crippled, I feel that there are such really heavy crosses for some parents, that the cross of stammering is something to be borne without lament.

There is nothing wrong with trying exercises or safe "cures" for stammering if the mother knows of anyone nearby who has some really useful knowledge. But she must approach any such help with a philosophic mind.

If it fails she might try the other plan suggested if she can manage it. If everything fails she has then a direct duty. And that is to see that the child is as happy as possible and that she cultivate happiness and acceptance in herself.

DARLING FOOL

....by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONNIE O'DARE, beautiful, poor and 20, is in love with DAN CARDIGAN, heir to one of the local fortunes. Dan professes to love her but is often neglectful. When she needs a friend CHARLES EUSTACE comes to her aid. Monnie believes SANDRA LAWRENCE, in Dan's own set, is trying to win him from her. BILL, Monnie's older brother, plans to marry ANGIE GILLEN, who works in a candy shop, as soon as she gets a divorce. KAY O'DARE, 16 and still in high school, is discontented with poverty. At a dinner party at Charles' home Monnie accidentally sees Dan kiss Sandra. HETTY, a housemaid at the Lawrence home, hates Sandra and suspects her of "vamping" JIMMY, the chauffeur. Bill and Angie quarrel. Angie says she hasn't enough money to put the divorce through quickly.

CHAPTER XII

Kay said, "I don't believe a word of it. You're just being nice to me." She went on, "I'll bet you say that to all the girls you meet," and smiled to show she didn't mean it.

The young-old man in the double-breasted suit grinned at her. Faultless was the necktie, striped and shining. Faultless the set of his sleek black hair. He had little lines around his eyes and his cheeks wore that too-well-barbered look. He had the air of weariness that comes to a man who stays up late of nights and talks too rapidly of days.

He said, "Baby, you're the prettiest thing this side of Chicago. Know what I mean, you've got class. Lots of 'em in the front rows of choruses would be jealous of you."

Kay, walking down High street in the neighbourhood of Vernon's drug store, took one swift look ahead before she plunged. There was a good deal of traffic (for Belvedere) at this time. It was 4 o'clock. The high school had long since disgorged its chattering, bright-clad throngs. Shabby ancient cars nosed the sleeker sedans belonging to the young matrons of Belvedere's "younger set." Kay did not want to be seen with this man, the travelling salesman who supplied Belvedere's one department store with silk stockings. Belvedere would not understand, said Kay to herself. Especially Monnie. Or Mother.

Still she didn't know what they objected to. He was polite—as nice as he could be, really. And he made the boys in Kay's class seem awfully raw and awkward. He was what she and her classmates called "smooth." He had a line and knew when to use it. How old was he, Kay wondered? Thirty-five, maybe? Forty, You couldn't tell.

She and Clarissa Briggs had "just run into him" one day at the Sweet Shoppe. They had been giggling over maple nut sundaes, Kay conscious of the fact that she should have saved her allowance for new shoes instead of frittering it this way, when they saw him. He had come in, glanced about inquiringly and then come straight over to their table. She and 'Rissy had pretended to be annoyed. "The nerve of him!" they had said afterward, with well simulated amazement. But he had carried it off well. He had insisted he'd met 'Rissy the last time he'd been in town and that she didn't remember him.

"That's the way with you girls," he had said, pretending to be chagrined. "Out of sight, out of mind." He had been talking to 'Rissy, but looking at Kay. She had, she remembered, looked rather well that day, in the red beret and new sweater suit, the one Monnie had given her for her birthday. Sixteen—she had been 16 in May. That was the first time she had realized, actually, that 16 was almost grown up.

Of course, she and 'Rissy had played for a long time at being sophisticated, bored with everything, women of the world, but she hadn't, until she met Chester Bigelow, actually appreciated the fact that she was almost a woman grown. Old enough for serious beaux, not just high school kids whose idea of a gay evening was to hop into a $20 touring car with most of its parts missing and ride out to High Springs for a bowl of chili con carne.

Chester was different. Why wouldn't Mother understand about him? Kay had never, somehow, dared to bring him home. Not that Chester had showed any desire to be introduced, formally, to the family. Anyhow Kay had the feeling that would spoil everything. The romance would vanish if Monnie and Mother and Bill and Mark looked Chester over coolly.

So she met him downtown whenever his route brought him to Belvedere. Sometimes he rented a car and drove down. Kay was a bit afraid to go riding with Chester. If her mother heard—if Monnie saw them—if Bill happened to find out—! Not that it wasn't perfectly all right. Chester was "simply a peach" and all that but the family wouldn't understand. Did families—ever?

Thus Kay. Now on this warm June afternoon she began to feel a trifle nervous about the whole affair. Chester was being insistent on seeing her that evening.

"But I can't possibly," she demurred. "We're having exams—all week. I'm up to my ears."

She thought of the classroom, warm crammed with perspiring youths and maidens nibbling pencil points. Bees would be humming outside the windows, hovering over the Dr. Van Fleet roses which were the principal's particular pride and joy. The teacher of the moment would be hot, sarcastic, edgy.

"Oh, I hate it all!" she burst out, suddenly, surprised at her own earnestness.

"Not me, baby!" Chester, his dark eyes bold and smiling, pressed his arm close to hers.

"N-no, not you." She smiled reluctantly. "Just school—this old town—all of it."

"Isn't that what I'm always telling you?" His slightly nasal voice, softened now, rushed over the words. "Aren't you wasting your time here when you might be doing something in the Big Town? Lots of girls no older'n you are in the choruses. Fact is, they like 'em. Maybe this time next year you'd be married to a millionaire if you tried it."

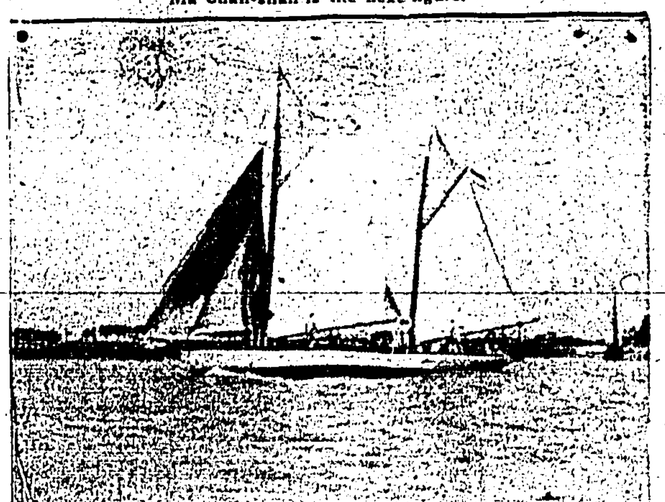
General Ma Chan-shan and Su Ping-wen, national heroes as the result of their military opposition to the Japanese in Manchuria, returned to Shanghai from Europe last week, when they entertained local Chinese journalists at the Lunghwa Military Yamen and reiterated their intention to oppose the Japanese forces in the North. General Su Ping-wen is at the left of the picture and General Ma Chan-shan is the next figure.

When Lieut.-Colonel Nagatsu, military attache at the Japanese Legation in Peking, shook hands with General Hsiung Ping outside the Japanese army barracks at Tangku, on May 31, the gesture marked the end of the Sino-Japanese hostilities in North China. At 11.11 a.m. on that day signatures were placed to the formal military truce between the two forces which had been waging a bitter military campaign inside the Great Wall. Photo shows the two principal signatories to the truce together with other officers from both armies apparently satisfied with the termination of hostilities.



The Chelidon leaving the Yangtzepoo anchorage last week for Japan, carrying on board a crew of five foreigners and two native laodahs. This was the third trip made to Nagasaki and her skipper Helmut Aust, has an enviable reputation as a skilled navigator, while the crew are all experienced yachtsmen who have learnt their sailing on the Whangpoo. The following made up the crew: H. Aust, J. C. B. Dewar, R. Lock, D. G. G. Allen, and T. B. McAuley. The trip to Nagasaki was completed in six days.

Captain V. Bremer, noted Finnish aviator, who is flying from Helsingfors to Japan, reached Shanghai last week and landed at Hungjao aerodrome after a stormy trip from Amoy in the face of a strong wind. He is shown with his plane in the centre of the above group, among those also present being the Acting Finnish Consul-General, Mr. A Sallmen, and Mrs. Sallmen; Capt. E. A. R. Fowles, of the A.P.C., and others who were at the aerodrome to meet him.

Captain W. Polte (centre) with Mr. Haensgen, mechanic, and Mr. Welter, Shanghai representative of Eurasia Aviation Company, are shown just after landing at the Hungjao aerodrome last week. The plane is one of three new Junkers W-34 models which are coming for use on a weekly service from Shanghai to Chungchak. Trouble in Sinkiang was reported by Captain Polte, for which reason another plane is taking Mr. Hwang Mo-sung, head of the Pacification Committee, from Lanchow to Urumchi.

WHEN the Manufacturers Life representative returned, it was too late! Unforeseeable physical developments had not only ended his earning days, but had left him uninsurable. No longer could he earn a livelihood for his dependants. Too late now to protect their future. Don't you say "some time later" to the Manufacturers Life agent. Let him tell you how to provide against life's uncertainties.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET STEADY

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was steady yesterday. Business done: 5,480,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—After rising to new high levels since 1931 due to another drop in the U.S. dollar the market declined late in the afternoon owing to heavy profit-taking and heavy short selling caused by a break in wheat prices. This break was due to a break in the heat wave which damaged crops in the spring wheat belt.

INFLUENZA PREVALENT IN HONGKONG

REPORTS to hand indicate that the present wave of Influenza is still hanging about. An attack means "laying up" in bed—unemployment—and much inconvenience. The quickest way to beat the 'Flu is to use 'ASPRO.' 'ASPRO' will stop Colds and 'Flu at inception. Immediately the first symptoms appear take 2 'ASPRO' Tablets and 2 tablets every three hours afterwards until symptoms disappear, a hot lemon drink to be taken immediately after the last dose before going to bed. It is advisable when taking 'ASPRO' for Influenza and Colds to keep the body warmly clad in order to prevent chill. 'ASPRO' won't fail you! It is sure, safe and certain. A child can take it safely. It does not harm the heart or injure the stomach and gives quick results because, after ingestion in the system, it is a solvent of uric acid, a powerful germicide and is anti-periodic, anti-pyretic and anti-fermentative.

'ASPRO'

Does Not Harm the Heart

'ASPRO' makes positive, definite and clear claims that it will relieve an Influenza or Cold attack in one night and it proves it. You can prevent 'Flu by taking 2 'ASPRO' Tablets at the first sign of a Cold, and 2 tablets every three hours afterwards until the symptoms disappear; a hot lemon drink to be taken with the last dose before going to bed. It is advisable when taking 'ASPRO' for Influenza and Colds to keep the body warmly clad in order to prevent chill. The value of 'ASPRO' for Influenza was proved in Australia when the Pneumonic Influenza Plague ravaged the country, and the Federal Parliament proclaimed 'ASPRO' a Necessary Commodity in the public interest.

MR. PITTMAN'S SILVER SCHEMES

Senator Key Pittman has struck his blow for the rehabilitation of silver. The rest is on the lap of the gods. There is nothing revolutionary about his proposals. He envisages the creation of an international currency standard, requiring a lower cover than is legal to-day and based partly upon gold and partly upon silver, in the ratio of eighty per cent. gold to twenty per cent. silver. Mr. Pittman also feels the need, as he has always done, for some check upon India's sales of surplus silver and appears to be offering a quid pro quo, to some extent, in the form of control of sales by producers. But essentially there is little in his proposals which will obviate the difficulties associated with the working of the gold standard since the war. Gold has heaped up in some countries, notably France and the United States, and has been wrested from the others. Reducing the legal requirements of a gold cover to twenty-five per cent. will not assist those countries who do not possess even a modest five per cent. Just as the gold standard has broken down, so will a gold-silver standard break down, unless steps are taken to guarantee that the currency backings shall be kept freely in distribution, instead of being tied up, frozen, in bank vaults. The classic method of operating the gold standard which must equally apply to any other satisfactory standard may be explained briefly. A creditor nation imports gold by way of finally balancing its claims on the world. That gold (or silver) goes into circulation, not in its metallic form, of course, but in credit and currency. Eventually the expansion of money in circulation leads to higher prices. These then attract goods from abroad. And to pay for the goods, the gold (or silver) is re-exported. Thus the metal is kept on the move, facilitating the growth of commerce, acting as a medium of exchange. Such an arrangement clearly demands that tariff and monetary policies should be attuned to international acquirements. Incoming gold must be allowed to have its effect on prices. Goods must be allowed to be imported for the purpose of restoring the metal to world commerce. But neither the one nor the other policy has ruled in post-war world relations. The country which is most often criticised on this score, and not without justification, is the United States, where the tariff system is too high for general commodities to climb. As the bulk of the world's gold has been gravitating towards the United States, in payment for war debts as well as for goods, one of the fundamental causes of the breakdown of the gold standard lies clearly exposed. The other problem, of allowing gold to have an automatic effect on prices is one of enormous complexity. One of the first countries where gold was deprived of this effect was the United States. During post-war years credit and currency supplies in the United States have been regulated with little regard to gold supplies. In the autumn of 1927, the United States, realising the international repercussions of this policy, strove artificially to expel its surplus gold. Rates for money were cut in an effort to drive gold to foreign centres which would pay a larger interest on it. What was the result? A speculative movement gathered momentum in Wall Street, and the United States in 1928, seeing the trouble that had been caused at home, tried to reverse its policy. Then it was the turn of the world at large to feel the change adversely. Clearly the problem of harmonising monetary policy at home with international policy is a difficult one, as President Roosevelt found immediately there came the suggestion from London that the dollar be temporarily stabilised. Unregulated anarchy in the money world must go on until such problems are settled either by the formulation of rules which will prove acceptable to all countries, or by a complete breakaway from the present financial system. The World Economic Conference seeks an acceptable formula which will permit an international currency standard to work within the classic lines. It is a problem which may yield to cooperation and a temporary adjustment to avert world-wide disaster, but we are firmly convinced that it can only be temporary and that security for the future will lie only in definite planning, during the respite thus gained, the transition period, so to speak, for transforming the entire economic system, for introducing the changes which are essential to the world's modern needs.

Pearl Buck and Confucius

Pearl Buck, author of "The Good Earth," who lived for years in China, seems to have acquired something of the Chinese way of thinking in spiritual matters. She is telling eastern audiences that Confucius means as much to her as Christ. "The Confucian concept of the superior man," she says, "cannot pass from earth." There are many well-read people of the Occident who have a high regard for Confucius and his teachings, but few would say with Mrs. Buck that they mean as much to them as Christ and his message to the world. Our thinkers do not regard the philosophy of Confucius as very deep, though its tendency is good and its tenets apply strongly to the common intercourses and amenities of life, being practical and livable. But these ethical teachings do not constitute a religion, nor did Confucius make any such pretence. Confucius applied himself to the problems of this world only and let the next take care of itself. There is nothing in the writings of Confucius to match the Sermon on the Mount. Christ was democratic, Confucius was a royalist, giving strong sanction to the despotic government of his time. This is one reason why in the Chinese Republic of to-day candidates for office are no longer required, as formerly, to pass a rigid examination in the "nine classics."

GROWTH IN UNIVERSITY DEVELOPMENT

A POPULATION OF 50,000 UNDERGRADUATES

By The Right Hon. H. A. L. FISHER, F.R.S.

It seems probable that the historian of the future will attach special significance to University development, as peculiary characteristic of our age. He may even regard the past hundred years as a golden era in the annals of University education.

A comparison between the position in 1850 with that which obtains to-day is in itself sufficiently striking. In 1850, the University population of England and Wales may have amounted to four thousand, of which the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge contributed the bulk—for apart from King's and University College, London, and Durham, no other University foundation then existed south of the Cheviots. To-day the University population of Great Britain numbers close upon 50,000, and fresh provincial Universities and University colleges have sprung up all over the country, to meet the growing demand for this particular form of higher education.

This amazing progress is due, partly to the development of University extension, partly to the great development of secondary education as a consequence of the passage of the Education Act of 1902, and partly to the liberal way in which after the War the Government provided facilities for University education to ex-Service students—thereby giving nation-wide advertisement to the idea of academic studies. To-day, Oxford and Cambridge have become more than ever national, as distinct from local, centres of knowledge, and Oxford, in particular, has become almost cosmopolitan in character.

But the change in the composition of our University population is, in many respects, even more remarkable than its numerical growth. In 1850, Oxford and Cambridge were reserved for Anglicans, who were in point of fact mainly drawn from the territorial class and were distinctly for the Church, the Bar, or a political career. The expanding business world of the North was, to all intents and purposes, completely severed from all connection with University life. To-day, it is probable that even at Oxford and Cambridge barely fifty per cent. of the undergraduates are what is known as "Public School men." The other half come from secondary schools, many having won their way through from elementary schools with the aid of scholarships, whilst a considerable percentage of students hail from overseas. In the case of the provincial and Scottish universities the proportion of students drawn from State-aided schools is, of course, then more marked.

Step by step, with those changes in population and personnel, there has been a correspondingly vast development in "new knowledge" and facilities. In 1850 classics and mathematics were, to all intents and purposes, the only branches of learning in which it was possible to graduate at the older Universities. No schools of modern languages existed; applied science, with all the expensive paraphernalia entailed, was unknown, and even elementary scientific teaching was in its infancy.

One result of the revolutionary change which has come over the whole intellectual conditions of the world has undoubtedly been that University education to-day stands for something far greater in the national life than it has done since, perhaps, the Thirteenth Century. To possess it has become a national aspiration. Every family, whatever its social circumstances may be, is beginning to look upon a course at some University as a plum that may well fall to the lot of its most brilliant member—an ambition cherished by almost every Scottish peasant pater familias from the year A.D. 1500 onwards.

But these developments have none the less brought in their train their own peculiar problems. The question of specialisation, for example, has come to the front with peculiar force. Ought all Universities to offer the same bill of fare, or are they justified, while maintaining the ordinary courses of study, in making some one subject their very own? In the case of the English provinces, University authorities would seem to have decided upon the latter course. Thus the University at Sheffield, situated in the heart of the metal industry, specialises in engineering and metallurgy. Leeds in textiles; Liverpool in tropical medicine; Reading in agriculture; whilst the Birmingham undergraduate may be offered a course in brewing.

This degree of differentiation appears to me all to the good, partly on grounds of economy and partly because it increases the individual's chance of hitting upon some sphere of interest which he may make definitely his own, and in which, with the aid of hard work and concentration, he may hope to win his spurs. For this very reason, among many others, I defend the classical tradition and discipline, which have always been associated with Oxford.

After all, the ultimate aim and object of a University education is to fit a man for his chosen career, to educate him as a citizen, and, furthermore, to enable him to make a noble and a profitable use of his leisure time—an ideal which differs in no essential—from—the goal of education in general.

It would, I think, be a grave mistake to lower the standard of admission to Universities, for it is important to realise that many man and women, well-fitted though they may be to play a leading part in the world's affairs, are none the less constitutionally and mentally unfitted to benefit to the full by a University education. To thrust it upon them would be a mere waste of their own time, and of that of their instructors.

"Oh, Horace, John is giving me trouble again. He's just come home from school, and he has some girl with him to whom he's just been married."

The Very Idea!

WORLD CONFERENCES

By Edward Kelly, Economist.

So many conferences are being held throughout the world these days, that they'll be hard put to it soon to find names to give to the new ones that should be expected any day now.

Probably in the near future we shall see the announcement of a World Conference to devise names and objects for other Conference.

About the only Conference they won't hold will be a Conference to end Conferences.

Take this Economic Conference, for instance. About the only important announcement that's been made so far is the one about the Delegates from the sixty-eight nations being asked to name their favourite drinks, which are on the house.

They call that being Economic. We'd hate to think what they'll offer the delegates when it becomes an Extravaganza Conference.

Success or failure of the Economic Conference, we are told, depends upon the stabilisation of the pound and dollar. And stability can only be achieved by credit.

Why, it's all so simple that we're in a chronic state of amazement that nobody has thought of the way out yet. That is, nobody expects us.

All they've got to do is to reverse the present order of things. As a case in point, suppose you are going to Happy Valley or Macao for the races. Under the present order of things, you go into the pari-mutuel and give the clerk five bucks. Why?

Under our system the clerk would work out before the race what the horse would have paid if he won, and instead of you giving him five bucks, he would give you the amount of the bet. If Three-legs, or whatever's the name of the horse you back, loses, you try again. If you don't pick a winner all day your credit is automatically extended.

Our system would be extended to banks, too. Instead of us going along to the Manager of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank for the loan of a measly ten bucks, he would chase after us with the offer of a loan at reduced interest.

It simply amounts to a reversal of the present chit system. Of course, there would be one or two drawbacks, as for instance, with shroffs. Under the present capitalistic system the shroffs chase us. Under our system we would have to chase them. But don't let that worry you.

What the world needs to-day is men of initiative at the helm. Men who, with their feet placed firmly to the ground, will not lie down on the job. Let us stand back to back and face the position. The Aegean stables of international politics must be cleaned by the hose of the public.

WITH INFINITE PRECAUTION.

Silently Pete swayed up the path to the front porch. Now where wash thash key? He hunted in his pockets. Five minutes later he found it and groped for the keyhole. Ten minutes later he found same, and turned the key in the lock. What a noise it made.

He hoped SHE was asleep!

Cautiously he opened the door, took off his boots, and crept inside. Behind him the door closed with a bang. He nearly collapsed with apprehension. Had that awakened her?

Still no sound from above. His luck must be in to-night.

With boots in hand he slipped upstairs in his stockinged feet. He pushed open the bedroom door, and crept in.

Still no sound from the wife.

He did not turn on the light. Carefully and fearfully he found his way to the side of the bed, undressed in silence, and groped under the pillow for his pyjamas. Then he slid stealthily into bed, trying not to shake it. With a sigh of relief he collapsed on the pillow.

Still no sound from HER. Truly his luck was in.

He lay for a while and listened. Everything was quiet. He could not hear her breathing. What was wrong? He put out his hand and felt. Nothing there. What had happened? Had she run away at last? Then he remembered.

His wife was spending the week-end at Repulse Bay.

NEW PAYMASTER EXPECTED

CHINA COMMAND APPOINTMENT

Col. W. J. H. Bilderbeck, O.B.E., of the Royal Army Pay Corps, is expected to arrive in the Colony shortly as Command Paymaster for the China Command, in succession to Col. D.G.N.I. Wimberley who left for Home six months ago.

Col. Bilderbeck was born in September 1889, and at the age of twenty joined the Dorset Regiment. In 1913 he became Lieut. and Paymaster attached to the Army Pay Corps and in February 1918 was raised to the rank of Capt. and Paymaster, being, in addition, temporary Major and Staff Paymaster from February 1918 until March 5,1921. In 1921 he was appointed Major and Staff Paymaster and on May 24, the following year was raised to the rank of Lieut. Colonel and Staff Paymaster.

During the Great War, Col. Bilderbeck saw service in France and Belgium, and was mentioned in despatches in January 1916. In 1914 he was awarded the Star and Clasp, and also holds the British War Medal, the Victory Medal and the O.B.E.

Australia will be one of the few fortunate countries of primary production to avoid a carry-over of wheat this year, despite its "bumper" harvest, states the Austral News Agency.

Shipments have already been made, this season, in more than 180 chartered vessels to Europe and the East, and large parcels have been sent away in the holds of regular liners. Large consignments of flour have also been made, and are still being made to the East.

JAPAN'S GOLD FOR LONDON

FUTURE SHIPMENTS DECISION

The Japanese government has decided to send gold specie to London in the future instead of to America. The buying price of gold in Japan, which has been unchanged since April 24, will be changed to a sterling basis soon.

The decision was due to the appreciation of gold in the London market, says Reuter.

AMERICAN VIEW.

Washington, June 20.

The United States Government considers currency stabilisation to be only one of the many problems before the Economic Conference, and does not think it should be made the keystone, according to Mr. D. G. Acheson, acting Secretary of the Treasury, who says the Government is not taking any stand on the general question of stabilisation, but does not see any great benefit in temporary stabilisation.

The Government is not intervening in the dollar market, but is leaving currency to find its own level.—Reuter Special.

PASSIVE ATTITUDE.

Washington, June 20.

Everything points to the United States adopting a passive attitude towards the World Economic Conference until President Roosevelt has developed his domestic recovery programme, aimed at improving general business conditions and relieving unemployment in America.

Meanwhile, the American delegation in London has been instructed not to commit itself without Mr. Roosevelt approval on any policy whatsoever.

A statement emanating from well-informed quarters says that Senator Key Pittman's advocacy of a general twenty-five per cent. gold and silver cover, may be regarded as President Roosevelt's answer to the European clamour for stabilisation of currencies, and is entirely consonant with the President's domestic and international policies.

Senator Pittman's pronouncement is hailed here as an indication that the Conference is tackling the fundamentals which lie behind the present world uneasiness and depression.

PARIS PESSIMISM.

Paris, June 20.

Official quarters here see no immediate way out of the impass at the World Economic Conference on account of President Roosevelt's attitude on stabilisation.—Reuter.

ANOTHER COMMITTEE.

Monetary sub-Commission No. 2 to-day discussed the gold standard and the relation of the nations thereto.

In the course of discussion, Sr. Cosio of Uruguay suggested the adoption of silver as a metal standard. The suggestion was made under the assumption that there was a scarcity of gold. He added that in his opinion a twenty-five per cent. gold cover for silver was psychologically dangerous.

M. Jaspar, while agreeing with the lower gold percentage, as proposed in the American resolution in connexion with remonetisation of silver, confessed some reservation in his mind so far as silver was concerned.

SEES NO AMITY.

During continued discussion of Senator Pittman's resolution, Chairman Kienbock suggested that no amity was procurable on two points, namely, that aiming at the stabilisation of money and that respecting re-establishment of the gold standard.

M. Parmenber of France approved the chairman's exposition.

Italy, however, supported that part of the American resolution concerning gold.

Viscount Hailsham declared that Senator Pittman's gold proposals exactly corresponded with the views of Great Britain on that particular matter.

COMMERCIAL POLICIES.

The Economic Commission has appointed a sub-Committee to consider the question of commercial policy. It will consist of seventeen representatives, including ten European countries, the United States, Japan and South Africa.—Reuter.

INDIAN STUDENTS IN ENGLAND

MANY WHO DO NOT BENEFIT

The report for 1931-32 on the work of the Education Department of the office of the High Commission for India again calls attention to an unsatisfactory aspect of the visits of Indian students to England for study.

The High Commissioner (Sir B. N. Mitra) has been confirmed in his earlier opinion "that it is a positive disadvantage to India that students should leave her shores who have sufficient educational, financial and physical resources to enable them to profit fully from advanced courses of instruction.

"To his own knowledge there are over many Indian students whose sojourn in this country has been unprofitable, either because they were from the outset inadequately qualified by preliminary training or because of failure of health or financial backing."

Mr. Thomas Quayle, Secretary of the Education Department, who is responsible for the report, states that there appears to be no sound reason why so many students who had already graduated at an Indian University should find it necessary to come here for further study or training which they could as well get in their own country.

He criticises the behaviour of some students, who, after their admission to one institution had been arranged, had either failed to appear or had sought admission elsewhere without notifying the original University or College concerned.

In the examinations, twelve Indians qualified for the F.R.C.S. or M.R.C.P. England; four obtained the Doctorate in Science, and 51 were awarded the degree of Ph.D. in various branches.

PUBLIC MONEY

VOTES OF $39,600 FOR FINANCE COMMITTEE

Following the Legislative Council meeting to-morrow afternoon, there will be a meeting of the Finance Committee to consider votes totalling $39,613, as follows:—

Estimates, 1933.

Post Office and Wireless.—B. Wireless:—3, Contribution towards expenses of Radio Telegraph Union $100.

Provision made in Estimates (page 25 sub-head 3) $640.

The contribution varies according to the expenses of the Union, and the estimates provision was based on the 1931 payment.

The accounts for 1932—the year covered by the Estimates—have recently been received. The expenses exceed those of 1931, and a supplementary vote of $100 is requested.

The above is to be met partially from saving under Documents relating to Radio Telegraph Services (1933 Estimates page 25 sub-head 4).

Public Works Extraordinary:—Hongkong, Miscellaneous. 39, Extension to Building Ordinance Office $11,000.

Provision made in Estimates (page 103 sub-head 39) $11,000.

The extension and alteration to certain offices of the Public Works Department was estimated at $22,000 and of this amount $11,000 was provided in the Supplementary Estimates for 1932. No payment on account of the work done was, however, made in 1932.

A re-vote is accordingly requested.

Public Works Department:—Special Expenditure Addressograph Equipment $6,460.

Now that the Addressograph has been installed in the Treasury, advantage can be taken of this machine for printing addresses for the Water Authority instead of installing another unit.

The following equipment is however necessary and a vote is requested.

22,500 plates, plate holders, tabs and buff cards and 2 cabinets for filing	$2,824
1 Graphotype and spares for embossing the plates G$976.25 @ 20%	$3,636
Total	$6,460

Quarters For Sexton.

Public Works Extraordinary:—Hongkong, Miscellaneous. 36, Chai Wan Cemetery Sexton's Quarters $2,500.

Provision made in Estimates (page 103 sub-head 36) $2,500.

The original estimate was sufficient to provide accommodation for two single men only. As single men will not usually be available it is proposed to erect married quarters and at the same time to provide a room for the keeping of records. This increases the cost from $2,500 to $5,000. A vote for $2,500 is therefore requested.

Sanitary Department:—3, Ambulances, Coffins, Dead Vans, and Dead Boxes $800.

Provision made in Estimates (page 67 sub-head 3) $1,000.

As a result of the outbreak of small-pox, expenditure on this sub-head up to the end of May amounted to $825.82 out of a total vote of $1,000. A supplementary vote of $800 is requested which it is hoped will prove sufficient to cover expenditure on this service for the remainder of this year.

The above is to be met from savings under 2 Morris Touring Cars (1933 Estimates page 68 sub-head 35).

District Office, South:—Rent of Offices $5,600.

Owing to the removal of District Office, South offices to St. George's Building it is now necessary to pay a rent of $700 per month and a vote is requested to cover the rent for eight months from 1st May to 31st December, 1933.

Improvements To Buildings.

Kowloon Canton Railway:—Special Expediture. Improvement to Taipo Market Station (South) $5,250.

The goods traffic at Taipo Market Station has increased to a far greater extent during the last half year than was anticipated, and it has become necessary to provide better facilities for the handling of goods at this Station as soon as possible.

The estimated cost for this work is $5,250, and as there is no provision in the current estimates, a supplementary vote of $5,250 is requested.

Public Works Recurrent:—8, Kowloon. Buildings. Item 2, Improvements to Buildings $750.

Provision made in Estimates (page 100 sub-head 8) $5,000.

Storage Tanks for the operation of flush closets in many Government Buildings is considered very desirable and the following buildings in Kowloon have been selected as requiring immediate installation of tanks; The Central British School, Kowloon Junior School, and the Yaumati Government School.

No provision was made for these improvements to buildings in the current year's Estimates and a supplementary vote to cover the estimated expenditure of $750 is accordingly requested.

Public Works Recurrent:—1, Hongkong. Buildings. Item 2, Improvements to Buildings $4,500.

Provision made in Estimates (page 99 sub-head 1) $21,000.

Storage Tanks for the operation of flush closets in many Government Buildings is considered very desirable and the following buildings in Hongkong have been selected as requiring immediate installation of tanks; The Central Magistracy, Queen's College, Wanchai School, Gap Road School, Peak School, Sisters Quarters Government Civil Hospital and Sisters Quarters Kennedy Town and Colonial Secretariat.

No provision was made for these improvements to buildings in the current year's Estimates and a supplementary vote to cover the estimated expenditure of $4,500 is accordingly requested.

Travelling Dispensary.

Medical Department:—23, Upkeep of Travelling Dispensary $2,000.

Provision made in Estimates (page 57 sub-head 23) $1,000.

This vote has been under-estimated. Up to the end of April, $742 was expended on running expenses, and the vote is now nearly exhausted. The average monthly mileage, for this year, has been about 1,550 miles, which is 750 miles per month more than was estimated for. In consequence it is expected that an additional $2,000 will be required to meet increased running expenses for the remainder of the year, and a supplementary vote for that sum is now requested.

Harbour Department:—31, New launch to replace No. 11 Police $653.

Provision made in Estimates (page 29 sub-head 31) $6,000.

The final payment for the construction of the new launch "Police 11" is now due amounting to $6,653 and the sum of $6,000 only has been provided in current Estimates.

$16,000 was provided in the Estimates for 1932, but of this sum only $15,305 was spent, the balance, $2,695, lapsing.

The launch has now been taken over by Government and a vote for $653 is requested.

Total ..... $39,613.

DRASTIC ALTERATIONS IN LOCAL FOOTBALL RULES SUGGESTED

BOWLERS COME INTO THEIR OWN

MANY COUNTY CRICKET ACHIEVEMENTS

YORKSHIRE, SURREY AND HANTS WIN EASILY

London, June 20.

Having had their averages ruined by batsmen during the last two or three county cricket programmes, bowlers came into their own in the course of the past three days, and fourteen trundlers individual analysis of note, among the best being P.G.H. Fender's 8 for 29 and Arthur Staples' 7 for 20.

The results provided one or two surprises. Surrey actually beat Essex, who have been carrying all before them, by an innings, and Hampshire, whose record is rather miserable, set about Middlesex and defeated the Lord's men by an innings and 119 runs.

Yorkshire, as usual, took the full complement of points, Gloucester being the victims. Rain so restricted the match between Warwick and Kent that it was impossible to complete an innings apiece and the teams took four points each.

The weather likewise affected Lancashire's game with Glamorgan which ended in the Northerners winning first innings points. Lancashire tried hard to force the issue, declaring at 159 for 3 leaving them 26 ahead on the first innings but rain stopped them from realising their endeavour.

BOWLERS DOMINATE.

Bowlers dominated when Yorkshire met Gloucester. The champions gained an advantage of 48 runs on the first innings, but fared so badly in the second, thanks to Goddard who captured 8 for 77, that Gloucester were set only 238 to win.

Bowes, however, repeated Goddadd's achievement and put finis to Gloucester's ambitions by taking 8 for 69 and sending the side back for 135 runs.

Leicester, after securing a lead of nearly 100 runs against Worcester, fared so badly in their second attempt, that they were dismissed for 71, Perks taking 5 for 28, and Worcester, by dint of careful batting managed to hit off the required 169 runs for victory for the loss of eight wickets. It was a thrilling finish to a match of fluctuating fortunes.

HOBBS'S BAD LUCK.

Surrey found a total of 268 perfectly adequate by which to beat Essex, who twice failed at the wicket. Hobbs had bad luck in not registering another century, losing his wicket when 15 runs short.

Brilliant bowling by Gover, (6 for 17) and Fender (8 for 29) proved the undoing of Essex who were sent back for 66 and 102).

A. W. Carr was in batting mood when Notts beat Derby. He carried his bat for 137 and closed the Notts innings at 404 for 4 wickets. Arthur Staples carried on the good work with the ball and Derby were hopelessly outclassed.

B. H. Valentine, whose batting for Kent this year has been a feature, added further to his laurels by taking 164 off the Warwick attack. Kent placed themselves in an unassailable position by scording 403 for 6, but rain put an end to the match after Warwick had replied with 67 for 2.

LINDRUM THE NEW CHAMPION.

Walter Lindrum, of Australia, won the English Professional Billiards Championship, at Dorland Hall, defeating J. Davis, the holder, by 694 points. Lindrum outplayed his opponent at both stages. In the first he scored 883 against Davis' 725, and with a lead of 337 he played so well at night that Davis never got within striking distance. Final scores: Lindrum, 21,815; Davis, 21,121.

Policeman Beats Bowls Finalist

J. C. BROWN LOSES IN CHAMPIONSHIP

The falling of the mighty seems to have started in the lawn bowls championship, for following the recent elimination from the tournament of L. A. Gutierrez, the present holder, another veteran bowler, J. C. Brown, has succumbed.

A former finalist, J. C. Brown was surprisingly beaten by R. Ellis of the Police R. C. when the pair met on the Kowloon C. C. green yesterday afternoon, the Happy Valley representative winning by 21 shots to 15 after a close and exciting match, which produced bowls of a very high standard.

Ellis was uncanny with his bowling and although Brown was not in any way off form, the Dock player was unable to cope with his opponent, and but for his experience would have been beaten by a much larger margin. Ellis took the lead at 7-2 on the seventh head but, when on the ninth Brown scored a four, he drew level and then went ahead of his antagonist.

On the 13th head the Kowloon Dock player was leading by 12 shots to seven but at the 21st head the scores were even at 15 all.

Always bowling accurately Ellis scored two singles and a two to make the score 19-15 in his favour at the conclusion of the 24th head. He then won by scoring two singles in succession.

A. S. Gomes v. R. Hall.

A. S. Gomes of the Club de Recreio met R. Hall of the Kowloon Bowling Green on an adjoining green and won by 21 shots to 15 on the 21st head.

The Portuguese player established an early lead by making the score 9-1 in his favour on the 8th head but Hall showed better form and drew level at 14-14 on the 18th. Gomes, by scoring a two on the 19th and then a four, made the total 20-14. He scored the necessary shot for victory on the 21st head.

The match between A. M. Holland and J. S. Logan was postponed.

L. E. Lammert failed to appear for his match against A. Hyde Lay.

HONGKONG DRAW WITH STRAGGLERS

MATCH RUINED BY RAIN

LOCAL BOWLERS FLOGGED

(Our Own Correspondent).

(By Telegraph, Copyright. Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1891. Received June 21, 1.18 a.m.)

London, June 20.

Rain, which affected numbers of county cricket matches, came to wash out the match between the Hongkong cricketers and Somerset Stragglers at Taunton to-day, the game being abandoned during the afternoon after the Stragglers had, in their second innings, scored 169 for 3.

On a rather tricky wicket, the Stragglers, who opened their second innings this morning with a lead of 13, batted cautiously and at the lunch interval had scored only 43 runs, but had the whole of their wickets intact.

After lunch, the batsmen brightened up considerably, and the Hongkong bowlers could make little impression.

The Stragglers remained at the wicket until tea when they closed their innings at 169 for 3.

Heavy rain fell immediately afterwards and made a continuance of the match out of the question, the game being abandoned from this stage.

GOLF.

CHAMPIONS FALL BY WAYSIDE

EDWARD KYLE WINS AGAIN

London, June 20.

There were many surprises in the second round of the English Amateur Golf Championship at Hoylake to-day.

Leonard Crawley, another ex-English champion was beaten by Sam McKinlay, a Glasgow journalist by 3 and 2 and Eric Fiddian, another ex-Champion lost to Iver Thomas of Lancashire 3 and 1.

The Shanghai representative, J. W. Harrison lost to J. C. Cowley of Hallowes by 3 and 2.

Edward Kyle, the Singapore player advanced a further stage, when in the third round he beat S. Roberts of Prestatyn by 2 and 1.—Reuter.

In the other league match the Chinese Bathing Club defeated the University Team by four goals to one. The score at half time was 2-1. The four goals were scored by Wong Yat-hung, Young Wai-lim, and Tong Po-cheung, who bagged two.

Local F.A., Demand An Explanation

ST. JOSEPH'S & FARCICAL GAME

At a meeting of the Council of the Hongkong Football Association last evening, a letter was received from Capt. C. E. Elliott-Heywood complaining that according to the newspaper reports the end of the season match between St. Joseph's and the South China Athletic had been a farce and that an explanation should be forthcoming.

Capt. Elliott-Heywood stated that apparently the game had been a farce from beginning to end, and the Association had been made to appear ridiculous in consequence thereof. He pointed out that the South China Athletic had apparently gone to the trouble of turning out their full team, which was what the Association expected of them. St. Joseph's had, however, treated the matter lightly and it was distinctly unfair to other clubs in the league.

The chairman: (Major C. M. Manners) the game was certainly a farce. Only five of St. Joseph's 1st XI players turned out for the game.

Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall enquired whether an explanation had been forthcoming and the chairman replied that none had been received to his knowledge.

Mr. T. Mitchell pointed out that many of the St. Joseph's team were unable to get away in time for the game. They had put out the best team possible under the circumstances.

Mr. J. Ralston referred to the fact that they had played one unregistered player and were therefore guilty of misconduct.

EXPLANATION ASKED.

Hon. Mr. Kotewall suggested that they write asking the St. Joseph's Club for an explanation of their conduct, a motion which was seconded by Capt. F. R. Williams.

As an amendment, Mr. Mitchell moved that as the season was now over, and in view of the difficulty the St. Joseph's Club experienced in getting a side together at all, the matter be allowed to drop.

The amendment was put to the meeting and defeated and the motion was carried.

Apologies for absence were received from Capt. G. C. Cooper and Mr. J. S. Logan.

The date of the annual meeting of the Association was fixed to take place at the Sports Club on Friday, July 14, at 5.30 p.m.

Mr. Y. K. Mok was elected representative of the Association on the Children's Playgrounds Association Executive Committee, and Messrs. Lowe, Bingham and Matthews were elected auditors.

D. R. JARDINE AND WINCHESTER

HONOUR FOR ENGLAND CAPTAIN

Mr. D. R. Jardine is to be the guest of honour at the annual Wykehamist dinner, which will be held at the Savoy Hotel on June 29.

Notices sent out by the Wykehamist Society point out that he is the first Wykehamist to have captained England against Australia, and state that "in doing so he has upheld the best Wiccamical traditions, not only by his leadership of the team, but also by maintaining perfect dignity—often under great difficulties."

Mr. H. D. G. Leveson-Gower, one of the famous of the elder generation of cricketers, will propose a special toast to Wykehamist cricket and refer especially to the centenary of "Eton Match." The hundredth game of the series will be played on the two following days, June 30 and July 1, at Eton.

So far, 53 games have been won by Eton and 26 by Winchester; there has been one tie (in 1845); and 19 games have been drawn. The first match was played in 1826, but five one-day matches during the War are not reckoned as belonging to the regular series.

CHOPPER ATTACK BY HUSBAND.

MAN GETS LIGHT TERM AT SESSIONS

A chopper attack by an infuriated Chinese who told the court that his victim was in bed with his wife, was related at the trial of the husband at the Criminal Sessions yesterday. The Puisne Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindsell, presided.

Lam Tai-yung, alias Lam Kan, of 3, Gilman's Bazaar, pleaded not guilty to wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm, Li Kwok Hung, known as Li Hung, of 154, Des Voeux Road Central, at the former address on April 22. He also entered a similar plea on a charge of malicious and unlawful wounding.

Mr. R. H. Lim, instructed by Mr H. C. Lee appeared for accused, and Mr. H. K. Holmes, Crown Solicitor, prosecuted.

The Jury consisted of Messrs. F. F. Duckworth, A. H. Harbord, G. Duncan, jnr., G. R. Payne, S. Feldman, Yeung Kwong-chui, B. C. Field.

Former Friends.

Setting out the facts of the case, Mr. Holmes said the three persons chiefly concerned were the accused, the wounded man, and the former's wife, who was the "woman in the case." By this phrase he did not wish to make insinuations against the woman, but she was involved, and how far she was involved would be a matter for the jury to determine.

Li Hung and accused were formerly fokis together in an opium business which was apparently illicit because it was raided at the beginning of this year. The two men remained acquainted however, after their business relations ceased. Accused, his wife, and a small boy who was related to them, lived in a front cubicle at 3, Gilman's Bazaar, and on April 21, the husband returned by the night boat from Macao where he had spent some days. He visited friends on his arrival in Hongkong and it was not until 3 a.m. that he returned home.

Jealous Husband.

According to his own statement, accused discovered Li Hung in bed with his wife, the small boy also being in the cubicle. Li Hung would seek to give an innocent explanation of his presence there and would say that the woman had sent for him because he was going back to the country and she wanted him to take a message to her mother.

Without doubt, Lam Kan was jealous of his wife and suspected her, and his account of what followed was probably an honest account. He would say that he heard his wife telling Li Hung that her husband had not returned from the country, and that she added rather a disparaging nickname.

Accused became very angry and, going quietly down to the kitchen, he obtained two choppers and returned to the cubicle. After an unsuccessful attempt to scale the partition he forced open the door and fell upon Li Hung with a chopper in each hand, inflicting several wounds on his head. The wife intervened and managed to hold her husband while the wounded man ran into the street but accused broke away, and continued and arrested by a police reservist, the pursuit until he was stopped

A Late Call.

In a statement made to the police, continued Mr. Holmes, accused had said that he had been married for several years and had come to Hongkong the previous year. Describing the events of the early morning he had said:—"I walked up the stairs quietly and stood listening on the stairs for half an hour. I heard voices and laughing." He added that he had persuaded a man who wore wooden shoes to walk up the stairs with him so that his wife would be unable to recognise his tread. After the attack and the chase, he returned to the house with the policeman and saw Li Hung coming out of the house with some clothing under his arm. The injured man fell down with a cry that he was dying.

Dr. G. H. Thomas, of the Government Civil Hospital, said Li Hung had extensive though not very serious wounds on his head when admitted to the hospital.

In the witness box, Li Hung said he was asked to call at the house by Lam's wife but he did not recall the invitation until some hours after it was given and it was 2 a.m. when he got there. He was lying on the opium bed and the woman was lying on the other bed when accused burst into the room with a chopper in each hand and attacked him with a shout of:—"One of us must die!".

Chan Ying-pan, police reservist said he was on duty when he met a man covered with blood running down Aberdeen Street, chased by accused who was armed with two choppers.

Threat To Kill.

Formal evidence was given by a Chinese constable, the owner of the choppers, Sub-Inspector Chester-Wood, and the Central Magistracy interpreter.

The boy who lived with accused and his wife, testified that Li Hung had threatened to kill him if he spoke of his visit to the cubicle in the husband's absence.

Mr. Lim said he had just been informed by the Crown Solicitor that he was not calling the wife to give evidence.

The Judge: They cannot. Surely you must have realised from the form of Indictment that she could not be called?

Mr. Lim then made a special application for the wife to be called and said she had previously given evidence.

Mr. Holmes: I certainly could not call the wife now because there is no allegation that he (accused) struck her. It has been laid down quite recently that the Crown cannot be forced to call any witness. It is not because I don't want the woman to be called that I object—I have no objection to my friend taking any advantage of her presence here, that he could. He can call her himself if he likes.

The Judge: I hold, Mr. Lim, that the Crown cannot be compelled, even on your application, to put the wife into the witness box.

The Silent Wife.

The case for the Crown being concluded, Mr. Lim said that he wished to submit that there was no case to go before a jury. The scene that accused witnessed in the cubicle was one which in law justified the wife killing Li Hung because the suggestion of the defence was that Li Hung was about to commit a crime on her. It did not matter in such circumstances whether it was the wife or the husband who did the killing and in this case it did not go so far as that. There was no evidence that the wife was a consenting party.

The Judge: The implication from the evidence before the court was that she made no outcry. I hold that there is a case to go before the Jury.

Lost Control.

The accused then entered the witness box and confirmed the previous statement made by him, outlined in Mr. Holmes' opening. He said that when he burst into the cubicle he lost control of himself and sruck at Li Hung with the choppers.

After considerable pressing, accused admitted that he waited on the stairs because he suspected there was a love affair between his wife and the visitor. He had once before discovered them together and had struck his wife on that occasion.

Mr. Lim said he wished to call his wife, and there was a stir in the court when she made her way to the box.

In a scarcely audible voice she stated that she sent for Li Hung to give him a message for her mother and when she let him in at 2 a.m. she told him this message and then lay down on her bed. He lay down on the other bed and witness went to sleep. As far as she remembered, nothing unusual happened.

When pressed witness recalled that there was a little fighting.

The Judge: Nothing unusual! Fighting and choppers in the middle of the night!

Witness said she awoke to find the men fighting but she did not know why they were fighting.

In reply to Mr. Holmes she repeated that she could not tell what happened because she was asleep.

In his address to the jury, Mr. Lim said that if not justified, accused's actions were excusable owing to the state of mind he was in at the time.

Summing Up.

Summing up his Lordship said:—"You will realise that the wounding is admitted. The whole crux of the situation is the motive that actuated prisoner. Mr. Lim has made a suggestion that he thought his wife was going to be ravished. I put it to you that that suggestion is utterly improbable. . . . Even if it was so, the Jury would have to be satisfied that it was necessary for him (prisoner) to get choppers to stop such a crime. . . . The real motive I suggest was that he believed they were committing adultery together. . . . If you think prisoner thought adultery was being committed and lost his head as a reasonable man might, you should find him guilty of the lesser offence."

After a short retirement, the Jury announced a unanimous verdict of "guilty" on the lesser offence, viz., wounding maliciously; and "not guilty" on the charge of wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm.

His Lordship said he was satisfied that accused had great provocation, but his action was not justified in law and he had assistance to hand. The sentence of the court was three months' hard labour, the commencement of the period to date from April 22, the date of the offence.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Occasionally at a tournament a freak hand will be dealt which will produce a lot of fireworks. One of the most unusually freakish hands that I have seen for a long time is the following hand which was dealt at a bridge tournament in Cleveland recently.

Looking the hand over, you will find that North and South can make six trump, six diamonds or six clubs, while East and West can make six spades or six hearts. You can imagine the great variation of bidding, and it was unusual to note that top score on the hand was received by a pair who bid for the least number of tricks.

The Bidding

South, the dealer, opened the bidding with one club. West overcalled with one heart. Personally, in the constructive one over one system, I would not open South's hand in this manner, and if South had opened with one club, I would make a negative double with the West hand. It is an ideal hand for such a double as it has both spades and hearts.

However, as the bidding actually occurred, North then bid three diamonds, East bid three hearts and South bid three no trump.

	♠6-3 ♥2 ♦A-Q-J-9-7-2 ♣A-K-8-2
♠K-Q-10-4 ♥A-Q-10-9-8-3 ♦8-6-5 ♣None	NORTH WEST EAST Dealer SOUTH	♠J-9-6-7-5-2 ♥7-6-5-4 ♦None ♣9-6-4
	♠A ♥K-J ♦K-10-4-3 ♣Q-J-10-7-5-3 12

West bid four spades, North and East passed, and South bid four no trump, which West doubled and North redoubled.

A small heart was opened and the declarer made seven odd. As his side was vulnerable, he scored 400 each for the three overtricks, 560 for the four no trump doubled and redoubled, and 500 for the vulnerable game, for a total of 2260 points.

It is rather difficult to give the correct bidding in a freak hand from both sides, as you always have the human equation to deal with. However, I believe it should be along the following lines: South should pass, West should bid one heart. North and South are vulnerable and North can make an overcall of two diamonds.

Remember that when vulnerable an overcall guarantees at least a five-card suit and a pretty good hand. East, having normal support for his partner and a void in diamonds, is justified in making a constructive response of two hearts.

South should support his partner's suit by bidding three diamonds, as this is the real safety of the hand. West will then show his second suit by bidding three spades.

North can bid four diamonds—remember his first bid showed a five-card suit, therefore his second bid must show it to be either a six-card suit or a fairly solid one. East will now support spades to four.

South can bid five clubs and West five hearts. North will bid six clubs and East six spades, and now South can bid six no trump.

West should not double, North will pass and East might be justified in trying for a sacrifice by bidding seven spades, as his side is not vulnerable.

DARLING FOOL

Dangerous talk this, for pretty, poor, proud 16. Dangerous whispers for the small ears of Kay O'Dare who wasn't a "grind," who wasn't clever at her looks, whose fortune was in her hyacinthine orbs and her small twinkling feet.

She said slowly, "You're kidding me, Chester. I couldn't—I mean I wouldn't get over—"

He interrupted. "Baby, you're the money. What I mean, you could knock 'em silly in the front rows. I've got a friend in show business—man like me gets around, you know—"

The voice purred on, softly, insinuatingly. Kay thought of Miss Mahon who was head of the English department, whose bitter, edged tone had cut into her consciousness that day.

"Miss O'Dare's notebook? But I didn't know Miss O'Dare had a notebook."

Kay had flushed scarlet, had stammered, hating herself, the teacher, everything. Was it her fault she wasn't brainy? Not everyone could be! Well, she'd show them all some day, all these old cats and foxes all over town. She'd show them what Kay O'Dare could do. They'd see her name up in lights, they would. They'd boast, primming their lips, "Oh, yes, I knew her, years ago—"

She'd cut them when she passed them in the street. She could see a high-powered car whirring down a glittering avenue—herself, slim, long-legged, wrapped in furs—chinchilla, maybe. A man in livery would slip down from the seat, rush around to hand her out. Some nosey woman in blue serge would buzz up to her. "Aren't you little Kay O'Dare?"

Kay would draw herself up slowly and disdainfully, answering her, "You seem to have the advantage of me!" Miss Mahon (for it would be Miss Mahon) would slip away, quite crestfallen.

"What's on your mind, sweetness?"

• • •

She came back to earth, to the shimmer of the June afternoon, to Chester, moist but dapper, beside her.

"I—I've got to be running along. My Mother will be wondering—"

"Aw, sweetness, don't be mean! Come on, we'll have a snack out at that place on the River Road. I've got the bus down at the garage."

Her eyes were wide, frightened. "I can't, honestly!" Was that Monnie she saw walking along on the other side of the street?

"We could dance, baby. Honest, I'm dying to dance with you. Bet you're a honey at it, aren't you?"

If it was Monnie, she was lost. She said in a madness of haste, "I'll meet you at 8:30 at the corner of Main and Arverne—if I can. Good-by."

She fairly ran.

Of course she wouldn't go to meet him, she assured herself. That was just to get rid of him. She wouldn't dare to go out to one of those night places. Chester didn't know it—she had, of course, pretended to be more sophisticated than she was—but Kay had never been out after sundown with a man. Boys had taken her to parties but usually Bill had called for her afterward.

She wouldn't go. Chester would be angry, would call her a "bum sport." She couldn't help it. And if he left Belvedere that night, as he had said he would, perhaps she'd never see him again. She felt a pang. Chester who held out these brave promises of the golden life for her in the big city!

Her mother met her with a worried expression. "Kay, someone's been calling you from the school. The office. You're to call back."

The voice of the principal's secretary answered her. "Miss O'Dare? Oh, yes, Mr. Bellamy particularly wants to see you before class to-morrow. Stop in, will you."

She hung up, with hands that shook a little. So she had flunked. That was what it meant! She couldn't bear it—couldn't stand the pity and the sneers. She'd have to do something to get away. Chester!

(To be continued.)

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Setting out on the trail of a Hollywood activity record, Victor Jory stepped straight from a featured role in "The Infernal Machine" to an important part in "Broadway Bad". He joined Joan Blondell, Ricardo Cortez, Ginger Rogers, Adrienne Ames, "Allen Vincent and others in the cast of this production.

Jory has yet to enjoy a day off since joining the films. His first picture was "Second Hand Wife", and he went from that to "Handle With Care", did a part in the all-star production "State Fair," and then joined the cast of "The Infernal Machine". Five minutes after he completed his role in that picture he went to an adjacent stage to appear in "Broadway Bad".

Others in the cast of "Broadway Bad," which is now showing at the King's Theatre, include Margaret Seddon and Donald Crisp. Sidney Lanfield directed the dramatic romance for Fox.

"Clear All Wires"

A peregrinating journalist with the nerve of a Bengal tiger, complications in Moscow with the secret police, too many women and thrills galore that are twisted into laughs mark the latest stage hit to reach the screen, "Clear All Wires," now playing at the Queen's Theatre. With Lee Tracy as the irresponsible and irrepressible newspaper correspondent, Benita Hume, Una Merkel and James Gleason heading an excellent cast, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmization of the Broadway comedy hit depicts the trials and tribulations of the fast-talking hero.

Tracy steals his employer's chorus girl and takes her from Paris to Moscow. He gets fired. He invades the Red Army. He tries to "frame" a shooting in order to register a scoop and get his job back. He falls into the hands of the Russian secret police. He lets himself be captured by Riffs. He tries to get rid of dancers and blonde sirens who storm the citadel of his love in vain. And finally the only sensible woman in the lot, played by Benita Hume, marries him and reforms him—for the time being at least.

James Gleason scores as Tracy's amusing assistant. An excellent supporting cast includes Alan Edwards, Eugene Signaloff, Ari Kutai, C. Henry Gordon, Lya Lys, Lawrence Grant, John Melvin, and Guy Isher.

"Tell Me To-night"

The heroine of "Tell Me To-night" is an exceedingly pretty Continental actress, Magda Schelder. Although only nineteen years of age she is a very well-known artist, having appeared in several successful plays and popular German films. It is interesting to note that prior to her appearance in the British film version of "Tell Me To-night" Magda Schneider could not speak one word of English, yet in this film her enunciation is excellent. She is a most natural actress, putting over her part of the saucy heroine, with whom the great singer, Ferraro, is in love, with a pertness that is fascinating in the extreme.

Dark-haired and brown-eyed, possessor of flashing white teeth, an infectious smile and saucy dimples, Magda Schneider is destined to become exceedingly popular with British filmgoers. "Tell Me To-night" is having its final run at the Central Theatre to-day, an astonishing mixture of romance, comedy and singing, set against a background of Switzerland, this picture has never been bettered.

"Fast Workers"

The most changed man in Hollywood to-day is John Gilbert.

To the film public's eye Gilbert suggests the princely trappings of "The Merry Widow" and the military nattiness of "The Big Parade."

Possibly that illusion will never fade for those who are loyal to the past. But John has laid that splendour in mothballs, rolled up his sleeves and donned a pair of overalls.

Thus he will be seen in his new picture, "Fast Workers," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer thriller of skyscraper construction directed by Tod Browning, that opens to-day at the Queen's.

As the title suggests, it is a story of high building adventure. John Gilbert, who was "Bardelys, the Magnificent," becomes "Gunner" Smith, a wielder of the trip-hammer. His throne is a precarious perch high up on the girders of a soaring steel skeleton.

FIRE AT A FETE.

MACAO CELEBRATION HAS ADDED EXCITEMENT

Macao, June 20.

The annual festivities on the occasion of the Feast of St. Anthony at Macao were conducted with the usual enthusiasm in honour of the patron saint of Portugal. Much good work is done at Macao in the name of St. Anthony, and the church of St. Anthony at Macao was again the venue of an al fresco fete.

The festivities commenced with the thirteen days' services and concluded with special services on Sunday, 18th inst., with a procession to mark the end of all the festivities.

Following the religious services, the fete, to gather funds for work among the poor, went on till a late hour, being unfortunately marred by a fire which broke out by the falling of a lighted paper balloon on to the roofs of the matsheds which had been built for the fete. There was little excitement, and all the souvenirs which were on display were saved; and with the timely arrival of the Fire Brigade the blaze was quickly subdued.—Our Own Correspondent.

Madame Zetkin was born in Wiederau, Saxony, in 1857, and was for some years a school teacher.

She lived in Paris, with the Russian socialist Ossip Zetkin until he died, and with her two sons returned to Germany in 1888 or 1889.

In 1889 she married at Stuttgart the well-to-do artist, Zundal, but in politics she retained her former name.

She was chiefly responsible for the progress of the Socialist movement among German women and always her influence was felt at party conferences. She was a fluent speaker.

After 1920 she has sat in the Reichstag as a Communist, however.

Towards the end of the war she was in prison for her political utterances.

AUSTRIA'S WAR ON NAZIS

KREMS LIKE AN ARMED CAMP

DRASTIC POLICE MEASURES

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright. Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received June 21, 18.39 p.m.)

Vienna, June 21.

Drastic police measures have been adopted in the towns of Lower Austria, following the ban upon the activities of the Nazi Party throughout Austria.

The arrival of Dr. Dollfuss, the Chancellor, has been followed by the proclamation of martial law at Krems, Mautern and Stein.

While the form of martial law enforced is described officially as merely an extension of the ordinary police powers, Krems resembles nothing so much as a town in the heart of a war-zone.

The town is like an armed camp. Machine-gun posts have been established at strategic points and public buildings are strongly guarded.

Doors must be closed throughout the city at eight o'clock in the evening and cafes must shut down at nine o'clock. Groups are not allowed to assemble in the streets and the transgression of any anti-Nazi ordinances is punishable by a fine or imprisonment summarily.

SHAKE-UP IN LONDON'S POLICE

HOME SECRETARY SEEKS REFORM

YOUNGER MEN TO BE RECRUITED

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright. Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received June 21, 11.56 a.m.)

London, June 21.

The Home Secretary's concern at "the weak spots" in the efficiency of the London Police Force, was expressed during a meeting of the Parliamentary Standing Committee.

The Committee was engaged in a discussion upon the Metropolitan Police Bill, which provides, among other things, for the recruitment of five hundred young men for short term service, not exceeding ten years.

Sir John Gilmour.

Sir John Gilmour said he was convinced of the need for younger men in the Metropolitan Police.

Under present circumstances, he said the force was not adequate to meet the increasing difficulties before it.

Among the reforms he insisted upon was that, somebody employed in Scotland Yard should be able to give information at any time about the state of crime and the methods of combatting it.

AMERICA'S TRADE OFFICES

DRASTIC ECONOMY MEASURES

The order from Washington which effected the closure of the American Trade Commissioner's Office in Hongkong has also had drastic effect in England and on the Continent.

It is understood that the London office will be reduced from the present staff of eleven men to but two, while the staff of 25 at Berlin will be cut to about half.

It is further learned that at least 24 members of offices on the Continent will likewise be recalled.

The men returning from London have been ordered to leave immediately or by July 1 at the latest.

The position in which the recalled men will find themselves when they return to Washington is unknown.

LANCASHIRE DECISION

SHANGHAI MAN'S ADDRESS

London, June 21.

The Manchester correspondent of the Financial News says that the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners have unanimously passed a resolution advocating support for all silver rehabilitation measures.

The meeting of the Federation held yesterday was addressed by Lieut.-Colonel F. L. Harden, formerly Associate Editor of the China Press.

He spoke at some length pressing for support for the international stabilisation of silver, and said that over one and a quarter million spindles in Lancashire have been scrapped and thousands of looms thrown into idleness purely as a result of the fall in silver prices.

It was decided to forward the resolution urging an effort to increase the price of silver to the Prime Minister, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and to all members of the House of Commons.—Reuter.

EVERY BUSHEL SOLD

AUSTRALIA'S WHEAT HARVEST

Australia will be one of the few fortunate countries of primary production to avoid a carry-over of wheat this year, despite its "bumper" harvest, states the Austral News Agency.

Shipments have already been made, this season, in more than 180 chartered vessels to Europe and the East, and large parcels have been sent away in the holds of regular liners. Large consignments of flour have also been made, and are still being made to the East.

FUTURE SHIPMENTS DECISION

The Japanese government has decided to send gold specie to London in the future instead of to America. The buying price of gold in Japan, which has been unchanged since April 24, will be changed to a sterling basis soon.

The decision was due to the appreciation of gold in the London market, says Reuter.

CAUSES OF THE CRISIS

VIGOROUS SPEECH BY MR. BRUCE

AGAINST CUTS IN PRODUCTION

London, June 21.

At the world Economic Conference to-day, a vigorous speech on the causes of the world crisis was made by the Hon. S. M. Bruce.

During the sitting of the economic commission, where the general discussion was mainly devoted to the subject of what the Australian Minister Resident in London—Mr. Stanley Bruce,—said Australia felt was the great object of the conference namely to increase world purchasing power and, as far as possible, avoid the remedy of a reduced would production.

"Restriction of production seems to us to be a terrible policy to accept," he said.

"We in Australia have great obligations to the world to develop a great continent and to utilise all our resources for the benefit of mankind."

THE COMMON GOOD.

It had been suggested many times, said Mr. Bruce, that the trouble was that the primary industries of overseas countries had increased their production and disorganised the world markets.

That would not bear examination. There had been an increasing obstruction of European markets by an ever-rising tide of protection for European agriculture. The result of the quotas imposed had been to stimulate in England production as well as to raise prices. This was an international conference trying to solve the troubles of the world as a whole and they had got to get rid of nationalistic ideas and to cooperate for the common good.—British Wireless.

It is now stated that the projected aerial service connecting Shanghai and Canton will be formally inaugurated in August, while special test flights will be made sometime this month. The two stopping-places will be located at Wenchow and Amoy.

At the moment, according to the report, no definite arrangement has been made for continuing the service to Hongkong, although this is contemplated by the promoters.

The subject is believed to be under discussion with the Hongkong Government.

Final details as to schedule will be determined upon the results of the test flights, although it is hoped to shorten the time between Shanghai and Hongkong to between five and six hours.—Special.

New York, June 20.

Reports of damage to crops owing to the intense heat wave in the Middle West caused a break on the New York Stock Exchange to-day.

BRITAIN WIN ALL FIVE

London, June 20.

As anticipated, Great Britain to-day at Eastbourne, won the remainder of their matches against Czecho-Slovakia in the semi-final of the European Zone of the Davis Cup, making a clean sweep of the five rubbers.

Fred Perry did not linger to admire the scenery in disposing of Hecht. He beat the visitor in straight sets 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, and was so completely the master, that he won his points just whenever he thought fit.

H. W. Austin followed this up by gaining a clear cut victory over Menzel, although the loser managed to obtain one set.

In fact the Englishman had all his work cut out in the first two sets. He lost the opening stanza 6-3, and had to fight his hardest to save the second at 9-7. Thereafter Menzel faded from the picture and went out to win at 6-1, 6-1.—Reuter.

Many flowers were sent by friends and sympathisers.

LAST NIGHT'S STORM

HEAVY RAIN, BUT FOR A SHORT TIME

Although last night's thunderstorm appeared to bring with it extremely heavy rain, the readings at the Royal Observatory show that between 10 p.m. and 11 p.m. the fall was .289 inch, most of it within a very short time, and between 11 p.m. and midnight a further .225 inch was added.

The total in the 24 hours ended at 10.30 a.m. was .70 inch.

T. V. SOONG'S ACTIVITY

VISITING OTHER CAPITALS

Paris, June 20.

It is understood that M. Paul Boncour and Mr. T. V. Soong had a general talk on the Far Eastern situation, Mr. Soong explaining his view to the French Government. There was no question of his asking for a loan.

It is believed that Mr. Soong intends similar visits to other European governments, although no special importance is attached to the interview and it is emphasised that Mr. Soong is returning to London on Thursday to lunch with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.

DETAIL WORK.

Mr. Soong is leaving the detail work of the Chinese delegation to the World Economic Conference to other members of the contingent, leaving him free to undertake exchanges of views with the representatives of other Powers on the Far Eastern situation and also, it is believed, discussing proposals by which his offer, during the plenary session, of China as the key to a solution of the world crisis, might be acted upon.

In an interview in Paris to-day, Mr. Soong told Reuter that he was visiting the French capital to pay his respects officially to the head of the French Government and the Minister for Foreign Affairs following an invitation from the French Government which he received while he was in the United States.

VISITING OTHER CAPITALS.

Later, in the same way, he will be visiting Rome, Berlin and Geneva.

While he proposes to take advantage of the opportunity to establish direct contact with the heads of the leading European governments, he had no particular subject to bring before the French ministers.

They had been exchanging views on the Far Eastern situation generally. He was not trying to raise any further loans.

"HAVE TO BE SATISFIED.

Asked whether he was satisfied with his talks with M. Paul-Boncour, Mr. Soong replied: "Of course. I have to be satisfied!"

Mr. Soong is seeing M. Daladier again to-morrow and apparently it is not quite certain whether he will leave for London to-morrow.—Reuter.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

FOR THE SUPPER PARTY

Grey Organza in Lovely Moulded Lines Makes This Stylish Triple-Service Costume

By Joan Savoy

So-called "garden party clothes" always intrigue women, even though so few ever get to garden parties.

Supper dresses are much more in tune with American life as it is lived to-day. And approximately the same type of pretty, feminine thing is suitable both for Sunday suppers and garden parties. Top the dress with a big hat, and there you are!

If you feel it in your bones that you are going to be asked out a lot, or will have to entertain a lot, or perhaps go to several stylish weddings, then you'll need type of costume.

One particularly good supper dress is made of grey organza, with lovely moulded lines, over a grey satin slip. It has long, tight organza sleeves, making it quite the right thing for dinner parties, too.

The smart new feature is the fichu made with ruffly edges that give the desired wide-shouldered effect, then taper to a point at high waistline and the ends cross to girdle the dress and fasten in the back.

Where the fichu meets at the V neck, there is a handsome red and rhinestone pin, an effective touch of colour against the moonglow organza.

FASHION NOTES

(From A Paris Correspondent)

The ensemble idea is still prominent, but shows frequently combinations of two materials, print and plain fabrics, or two colours, rather than entirely matching. Many of the new gowns shown have an accompanying coat.

A general feature of the new mode is the concentration of interest in the backs of the models this applying especially to skirts.

Draperies reminiscent of the bustle are quite frequently attempted. Skirts often concentrate their fullness in the back.

For evening wear some are finished with what might be called rudimentary trains. Most women are probably tired of the broad-shouldered line and this, I think, has gone more or less into oblivion. Women this season want to be more feminine.

Pockets are patched on the sports suits, and the sports dress, as many as four to a garment, sometimes, and almost always two.

Sports suits look to their buttons or metal clips for practically the sole means of ornamentation.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

A mother has asked me about stammering. She is greatly distressed about her three-year-old boy who looks up at her so pitifully after an attempt at words and says, "Mother, I can't talk."

She despairs of curing him because it runs in the family, and asks me if I can give her any advice that will help ever so little.

What can I say, what can I do, except give the general information about plenty of rest, plenty of fresh air, not too much excitement, and a great deal of happiness? Of course, she has heard all this before. And, she has heard, too, that many children during their adventurous fourth year (after three) begin to stammer because their excited thoughts get ahead of their tongues. Naturally they get over it in time unless the habit is deepened and set by perpetual reference to it in the family.

Seek Able Advice

I read a treatise on stammering not long ago and when I was through I had learned something about glands, nerves, and co-ordination, but was not one step ahead of where I started as far as cure was concerned.

There are research centres where cures are being studied and worked out with more or less success. There are people who go about and conduct classes for stammerers who do much good. Whether they work permanent cures or not I cannot say.

If I had a child whom I felt was in for a life of inhibited speech, I should write to the medical centre of the nearest large city, and get first-hand advice about whom to consult. Such a course might result in treatment at a hospital, or merely in a course of procedure at home to be carried out patiently.

Spare Child Embarrassment

But I first would be sure that it was right advice and not too experimental, and that it was in the hands of a doctor who really knew all that can be known about this perplexing affliction.

One thing I should do, having this in my family. That is to prevent the little soul from seeing how unhappy and worried I was about it. I would campaign among my friends and his playmates to treat it as a matter of course and not add self-consciousness and embarrassment to make him still more unhappy.

I should have him accept it as a matter of course. As tactfully and carefully as I could I would have him speak slowly. Many children outgrow it. They do so more quickly if they are not reminded of it. And they must not see that their parents are distressed.

There Are Worse Afflictions

It is a cross to bear, I know, but after my visit to a large Children's Hospital three days ago, where so many of the little sufferers will never be out of bed, or will go through life hopelessly crippled, I feel that there are such really heavy crosses for some parents, that the cross of stammering is something to be borne without lament.

There is nothing wrong with trying exercises or safe "cures" for stammering if the mother knows of anyone nearby who has some really useful knowledge. But she must approach any such help with a philosophic mind.

If it fails she might try the other plan suggested if she can manage it. If everything fails she has then a direct duty. And that is to see that the child is as happy as possible and that she cultivate happiness and acceptance in herself.

DARLING FOOL

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONNIE O'DARE, beautiful, poor and 20, is in love with DAN CARRIGAN, heir to one of the local fortunes. Dan professes to love her but is often neglectful. When she needs a friend CHARLES EUSTACE comes to her aid. Monnie believes SANDRA LAWRENCE, in Dan's own set, is trying to win him from her. BILL, Monnie's older brother, plans to marry ANGIE GILLEN, who works in a candy shop, as soon as she gets a divorce. KAY O'DARE, 16 and still in high school, is discontented with poverty. At a dinner party at Charles' home Monnie accidentally sees Dan kiss Sandra. BETTY, a housemaid at the Lawrence home, hates Sandra and suspects her of "vamping" JIMMY, the chauffeur. Bill and Angie quarrel. Angie says she hasn't enough money to put the divorce through quickly.

CHAPTER XII

Kay said, "I don't believe a word of it. You're just being nice to me." She went on, "I'll bet you say that to all the girls you meet," and smiled to show she didn't mean it.

The young-old man in the double-breasted suit grinned at her. Faultless was the necktie, striped and shining. Faultless the set of his sleek black hair. He had little lines around his eyes and his cheeks wore that too-well-barbered look. He had the air of weariness that comes to a man who stays up late of nights and talks too rapidly of days.

He said, "Baby, you're the prettiest thing this side of Chicago. Know what I mean, you've got class. Lots of 'em in the front rows of choruses would be jealous of you."

Kay, walking down High street in the neighbourhood of Vernon's drug store, took one swift look ahead before she plunged. There was a good deal of traffic (for Belvedere) at this time. It was 4 o'clock. The high school had long since disgorged its chattering, bright-clad throngs. Shabby ancient cars nosed the sleeker sedans belonging to the young matrons of Belvedere's "younger set." Kay did not want to be seen with this man, the travelling salesman who supplied Belvedere's one department store with silk stockings. Belvedere would not understand, said Kay to herself. Especially Monnie. Or Mother.

Still she didn't know what they objected to. He was polite—as nice as he could be, really. And he made the boys in Kay's class seem awfully raw and awkward. He was what she and her classmates called "smooth." He had a line and knew when to use it. How old was he, Kay wondered? Thirty-five, maybe? Forty. You couldn't tell.

She and Clarissa Briggs had "just run into him" one day at the Sweet Shoppe. They had been giggling over maple nut sundaes, Kay conscious of the fact that she should have saved her allowance for new shoes instead of frittering it this way, when they saw him. He had come in, glanced about inquiringly and then come straight over to their table. She and 'Rissy had pretended to be annoyed. "The nerve of him!" they had said afterward, with well simulated amazement. But he had carried it off well. He had insisted he'd met 'Rissy the last time he'd been in town and that she didn't remember him.

"That's the way with you girls," he had said, pretending to be chagrined. "Out of sight, out of mind." He had been talking to 'Rissy, but looking at Kay. She had, she remembered, looked rather well that day, in the red beret and new sweater suit, the one Monnie had given her for her birthday. Sixteen—she had been 16 in May. That was the first time she had realized, actually, that 16 was almost grown up.

Of course, she and 'Rissy had played for a long time at being sophisticated, bored with everything, women of the world, but she hadn't, until she met Chester Bigelow, actually appreciated the fact that she was almost a woman grown. Old enough for serious beaux, not just high school kids whose idea of a gay evening was to hop into a $20 touring car with most of its parts missing and ride out to High Springs for a bowl of chili con carne.

* * *

Chester was different. Why wouldn't Mother understand about him? Kay had never, somehow, dared to bring him home. Not that Chester had showed any desire to be introduced, formally, to the family. Anyhow Kay had the feeling that would spoil everything. The romance would vanish if Monnie and Mother and Bill and Mark looked Chester over coolly.

So she met him downtown whenever his route brought him to Belvedere. Sometimes he rented a car and drove down. Kay was a bit afraid to go riding with Chester. If her mother heard—if Monnie saw them—if Bill happened to find out—! Not that it wasn't perfectly all right. Chester was "simply a peach" and all that but the family wouldn't understand. Did families—ever?

Thus Kay. Now on this warm June afternoon she began to feel a trifle nervous about the whole affair. Chester was being insistent on seeing her that evening.

"But I can't possibly," she demurred. "We're having exams—all week. I'm up to my ears."

She thought of the classroom, warm crammed with perspiring youths and maidens nibbling pencil points. Bees would be humming outside the windows, hovering over the Dr. Van Fleet roses which were the principal's particular pride and joy. The teacher of the moment would be hot, sarcastic, edgy.

"Oh, I hate it all!" she burst out, suddenly, surprised at her own earnestness.

"Not me, baby!" Chester, his dark eyes bold and smiling, pressed his arm close to hers.

"N-no, not you." She smiled reluctantly. "Just school—this old town—all of it."

"Isn't that what I'm always telling you?" His slightly nasal voice, softened now, rushed over the words. "Aren't you wasting your time here when you might be doing something in the Big Town? Lots of girls no older'n you are in the choruses. Fact is, they like 'em. Maybe this time next year you'd be married to a millionaire if you tried it."

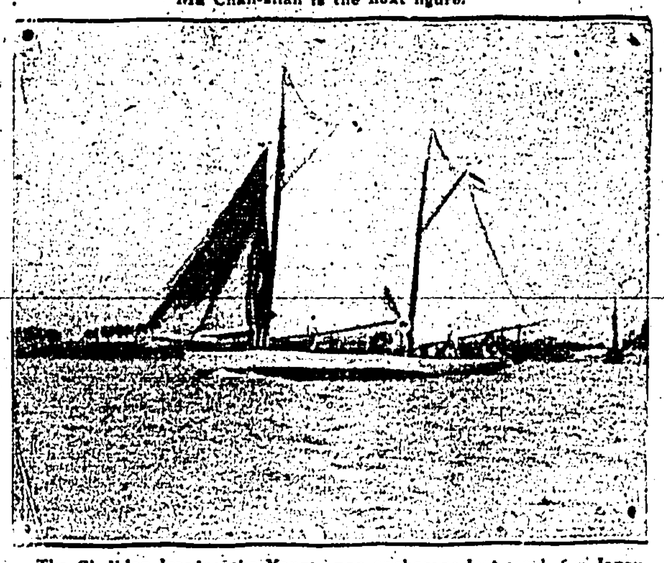
Pictured above are the Japanese members of the army delegation which carried through the negotiations with the Chinese for a cessation of hostilities in North China. Major-General Okamura, chief delegate is standing in the centre. The photo graph was taken outside the Japanese Army Barracks at Tangku, immediately after the signing of the truce.

When Lieut.-Colonel Nagatsu, military attache at the Japanese Legation in Peking, shook hands with General Hsiung Ping outside the Japanese army barracks at Tangku, on May 31, the gesture marked the end of the Sino-Japanese hostilities in North China. At 11.11 a.m. on that day signatures were placed to the formal military truce between the two forces which had been waging a bitter military campaign inside the Great Wall. Photo shows the two principal signatories to the truce together with other officers from both armies apparently satisfied with the termination of hostilities.

Captain V. Bremer, noted Finnish aviator, who is flying from Helsingfors to Japan, reached Shanghai last week and landed at Hungjao aerodrome after a stormy trip from Amoy in the face of a strong wind. He is shown with his plane in the centre of the above group, among those also present being the Acting Finnish Consul-General, Mr. A Sallmen, and Mrs. Sallmen; Capt. E. A. R. Fowles, of the A.P.C.; and others who were at the aerodrome to meet him.

General Ma Chan-shan and Su Ping-wen, national heroes as the result of their military opposition to the Japanese in Manchuria, returned to Shanghai from Europe last week, when they entertained local Chinese journalists at the Lunghwa Military Yamen and reiterated their intention to oppose the Japanese forces in the North. General Su Ping-wen is at the left of the picture and General Ma Chan-shan is the next figure.



The Chelidon leaving the Yangtzepoo anchorage last week for Japan, carrying on board a crew of five foreigners and two native laodahs. This was the third trip made to Nagasaki and her skipper Helmut Aust, has an enviable reputation as a skilled navigator, while the crew are all experienced yachtsmen who have learnt their sailing on the Whangpoo. The following made up the crew: H. Aust, J. G. B. Dewar, R. Lock, D. G. G. Allen, and T. B. McAuley. The trip to Nagasaki was completed in six days.

Captain W. Polte (centre) with Mr. Haenigen, mechanic, and Mr. Welter, Shanghai representative of Eurasia Aviation Company, are shown just after landing at the Hungjao aerodrome last week. The plane is one of three new Junkers W-34 models which are coming for use on a weekly service from Shanghai to Chungshak. Trouble in Sinkiang was reported by Captain Polte, for which reason another plane is taking Mr. Hwang Mo-sung, head of the Pacification Committee, from Lanchow to Urumchi.

SHAUKIWAN CRIME

MURDER CASE TO BE HEARD

The case in which Tan Hing (20) and Yeung Shui-kui, a married woman, are charged with the murder of a Chinese woman at Shaukiwan on May 31 last, will be commenced before Mr. Schofield at the Central Magistracy to-morrow at 2.30 p.m.

Both accused made another formal appearance before his Worship this morning.

The case is a sequel to the finding of a body in a house at Shaukiwan. The victim had been strangled to death, and money stolen from her. The body was found in the ground floor of 57, Kam Sah Street.

BUILDING WITHOUT AUTHORITY

WORK DONE TO BE PULLED DOWN

The Cheung Hop Building Contractors, of No. 1 and 3 Chatham Road, Hunghom, were summoned before Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, for having commenced work on five Chinese style houses in Shaukiwan without the permission of the building authorities.

Mr. Brooksbank, of the P. W. D., prosecuting, said defendant had submitted plans which had not been approved, but had been sent back about three or four times for alterations. In spite of that, however, defendants had erected reinforcements, which were not in accord with the plans. It was a rather serious offence, because if the plans were not approved, the architects would not go and inspect the houses being built. The work had, however, ceased since the summons was taken out.

Mr. Schofield ordered the work done to be pulled down, and the foundation re-laid to the satisfaction of the building authorities, and also imposed a fine of $100.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET STEADY

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was steady yesterday. Business done: 5,480,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—After rising to new high levels since 1931 due to another drop in the U.S. dollar the market declined late in the afternoon owing to heavy profit-taking and heavy short selling caused by a break in wheat prices. This break was due to a break in the heat wave which damaged crops in the spring wheat belt.

MR. PITTMAN'S SILVER SCHEMES

Senator Key Pittman has struck his blow for the rehabilitation of silver. The rest is on the lap of the gods. There is nothing revolutionary about his proposals. He envisages the creation of an international currency standard, requiring a lower cover than is legal to-day and based partly upon gold and partly upon silver, in the ratio of eighty per cent. gold to twenty per cent. silver. Mr. Pittman also feels the need, as he has always done, for some check upon India's sales of surplus silver and appears to be offering a quid pro quo, to some extent, in the form of control of sales by producers. But essentially there is little in his proposals which will obviate the difficulties associated with the working of the gold standard since the war. Gold has heaped up in some countries, notably France and the United States, and has been wrested from the others. Reducing the legal requirements of a gold cover to twenty-five per cent. will not assist those countries who do not possess even a modest five per cent. Just as the gold standard has broken down, so will a gold-silver standard break down, unless steps are taken to guarantee that the currency backings shall be kept freely in distribution, instead of being tied up, frozen, in bank vaults. The classic method of operating the gold standard which must equally apply to any other satisfactory standard may be explained briefly. A creditor nation imports gold by way of finally balancing its claims on the world. That gold (or silver) goes into circulation, not in its metallic form, of course, but in credit and currency. Eventually the expansion of money in circulation leads to higher prices. These then attract goods from abroad. And to pay for the goods, the gold (or silver) is re-exported. Thus the metal is kept on the move, facilitating the growth of commerce, acting as a medium of exchange. Such an arrangement clearly demands that tariff and monetary policies should be attuned to international acquirements. Incoming gold must be allowed to have its effect on prices. Goods must be allowed to be imported for the purpose of restoring the metal to world commerce. But neither the one nor the other policy has ruled in post-war world relations. The country which is most often criticised on this score, and not without justification, is the United States, where the tariff system is too high for general commodities to climb. As the bulk of the world's gold has been gravitating towards the United States, in payment for war debts as well as for goods, one of the fundamental causes of the breakdown of the gold standard lies clearly exposed. The other problem, of allowing gold to have an automatic effect on prices is one of enormous complexity. One of the first countries where gold was deprived of this effect was the United States. During post-war years credit and currency supplies in the United States have been regulated with little regard to gold supplies. In the autumn of 1927, the United States, realising the international repercussions of this policy, strove artificially to expel its surplus gold. Rates for money were cut in an effort to drive gold to foreign centres which would pay a larger interest on it. What was the result? A speculative movement gathered momentum in Wall Street, and the United States in 1928, seeing the trouble that had been caused at home, tried to reverse its policy. Then it was the turn of the world at large to feel the change adversely. Clearly the problem of harmonising monetary policy at home with international policy is a difficult one, as President Roosevelt found immediately there came the suggestion from London that the dollar be temporarily stabilised. Unregulated anarchy in the money world must go on until such problems are settled either by the formulation of rules which will prove acceptable to all countries, or by a complete breakaway from the present financial system. The World Economic Conference seeks an acceptable formula which will permit an international currency standard to work within the classic lines. It is a problem which may yield to cooperation and a temporary adjustment to avert world-wide disaster, but we are firmly convinced that it can only be temporary and that security for the future will lie only in definite planning, during the respite thus gained, the transition period, so to speak, for transforming the entire economic system, for introducing the changes which are essential to the world's modern needs.

Pearl Buck and Confucius

Pearl Buck, author of "The Good Earth," who lived for years in China, seems to have acquired something of the Chinese way of thinking in spiritual matters. She is telling eastern audiences that Confucius means as much to her as Christ. "The Confucian concept of the superior man," she says, "cannot pass from earth." There are many well-read people of the Occident who have a high regard for Confucius and his teachings, but few would say with Mrs. Buck that they mean as much to them as Christ and his message to the world. Our thinkers do not regard the philosophy of Confucius as very deep, though its tendency is good and its tenets apply strongly to the common intercourses and amenities of life, being practical and livable. But these ethical teachings do not constitute a religion, nor did Confucius make any such pretence. Confucius applied himself to the problems of this world only and let the next take care of itself. There is nothing in the writings of Confucius to match the Sermon on the Mount. Christ was democratic, Confucius was a royalist, giving strong sanction to the despotic government of his time. This is one reason why in the Chinese Republic of to-day candidates for office are no longer required, as formerly, to pass a rigid examination in the "nine classics."

GROWTH IN UNIVERSITY DEVELOPMENT

By The Right Hon. H. A. L. FISHER, F.R.S.

It seems probable that the historian of the future will attach special significance to University development, as peculiary characteristic of our age. He may even regard the past hundred years as a golden era in the annals of University education.

A comparison between the position in 1850 with that which obtains to-day is in itself sufficiently striking. In 1850, the University population of England and Wales may have amounted to four thousand, of which the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge contributed the bulk—for apart from King's and University College, London, and Durham, no other University foundation then existed south of the Cheviots. To-day the University population of Great Britain numbers close upon 50,000, and fresh provincial Universities and University colleges have sprung up all over the country, to meet the growing demand for this particular form of higher education.

This amazing progress is due, partly to the development of University extension, partly to the great development of secondary education as a consequence of the passage of the Education Act of 1902, and partly to the liberal way in which after the War the Government provided facilities for University education to ex-Service students—thereby giving nation-wide advertisement to the idea of academic studies. To-day, Oxford and Cambridge have become more than ever national, as distinct from local, centres of knowledge, and Oxford, in particular, has become almost cosmopolitan in character.

But the change in the composition of our University population is, in many respects, even more remarkable than its numerical growth. In 1850, Oxford and Cambridge were reserved for Anglicans, who were in point of fact mainly drawn from the territorial class and were distinctly for the Church, the Bar, or a political career. The expanding business world of the North was, to all intents and purposes, completely severed from all connection with University life. To-day, it is probable that even at Oxford and Cambridge barely fifty per cent. of the undergraduates are what is known as "Public School men." The other half come from secondary schools, many having won their way through from elementary schools with the aid of scholarships, whilst a considerable percentage of students hail from overseas. In the case of the provincial and Scottish universities the proportion of students drawn from State-aided schools is, of course, then more marked.

Step by step, with these changes in population and personnel, there has been a correspondingly vast development in "new knowledge" and facilities. In 1850 classics and mathematics were, to all intents and purposes, the only branches of learning in which it was possible to graduate at the older Universities. No schools of modern languages existed; applied science, with all the expensive paraphernalia entailed, was unknown, and even elementary scientific teaching was in its infancy.

One result of the revolutionary change which has come over the whole intellectual conditions of the world has undoubtedly been that University education to-day stands for something far greater in the national life than it has done since, perhaps, the Thirteenth Century. To possess it has become a national aspiration. Every family, whatever its social circumstances may be, is beginning to look upon a course at some University as a plum that may well fall to the lot of its most brilliant member—an ambition cherished by almost every Scottish peasant pater familias from the year A.D. 1500 onwards.

But these developments have none the less brought in their train their own peculiar problems. The question of specialisation, for example, has come to the front with peculiar force. Ought all Universities to offer the same bill of fare, or are they justified, while maintaining the ordinary courses of study, in making some one subject their very own? In the case of the English provinces, University authorities would seem to have decided upon the latter course. Thus the University at Sheffield, situated in the heart of the metal industry, specialises in engineering and metallurgy, Leeds in textiles; Liverpool in tropical medicine; Reading in agriculture; whilst the Birmingham undergraduate may be offered a course in brewing.

This degree of differentiation appears to me all to the good, partly on grounds of economy and partly because it increases the individual's chance of hitting upon some sphere of interest which he may make definitely his own, and in which, with the aid of hard work and concentration, he may hope to win his spurs. For this very reason, among many others, I defend the classical tradition and discipline, which have always been associated with Oxford.

After all, the ultimate aim and object of a University education is to fit a man for his chosen career, to educate him as a citizen, and, furthermore, to enable him to make a noble and a profitable use of his leisure time—an ideal which differs in no essential from the goal of education in general.

It would, I think, be a grave mistake to lower the standard of admission to Universities, for it is important to realise that many man and women, well-fitted though they may be to play a leading part in the world's affairs, are none the less constitutionally and mentally unfitted to benefit to the full by a University education. To thrust it upon them would be a mere waste of their own time, and of that of their instructors.

"Oh, Horace, John is giving me trouble again. He's just come home from school, and he has some girl with him to whom he's just been married."

The Very Idea!

WORLD CONFERENCES

By Edward Kelly, Economist.

So many conferences are being held throughout the world these days, that they'll be hard put to it soon to find names to give to the new ones that should be expected any day now.

Probably in the near future we shall see the announcement of a World Conference to devise names and objects for other Conference.

About the only Conference they won't hold will be a Conference to end Conferences.

Take this Economic Conference, for instance. About the only important announcement that's been made so far is the one about the Delegates from the sixty-eight nations being asked to name their favourite drinks, which are on the house.

They call that being Economic. We'd hate to think what they'll offer the delegates when it becomes an Extravaganza Conference.

Success or failure of the Economic Conference, we are told, depends upon the stabilisation of the pound and dollar. And stability can only be achieved by credit.

Why, it's all so simple that we're in a chronic state of amazement that nobody has thought of the way out yet. That is, nobody expects us.

All they've got to do is to reverse the present order of things. As a case in point, suppose you are going to Happy Valley or Macao for the races. Under the present order of things, you go into the pari-mutuel and give the clerk five bucks. Why?

Under our system the clerk would work out before the race what the horse would have paid if he won, and instead of you giving him five bucks, he would give you the amount of the bet. If Threelegs, or whatever's the name of the horse you back, loses, you try again. If you don't pick a winner all day your credit is automatically extended.

Our system would be extended to banks, too. Instead of us going along to the Manager of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank for the loan of a measly ten bucks, he would chase after us with the offer of a loan at reduced interest.

It simply amounts to a reversal of the present chit system. Of course, there would be one or two drawbacks, as for instance, with shroffs. Under the present capitalistic system the shroffs chase us. Under our system we would have to chase them. But don't let that worry you.

What the world needs to-day is men of initiative at the helm. Men who, with their feet placed firmly to the ground, will not lie down on the job. Let us stand back to back and face the position. The Aegean stables of international politics must be cleaned by the hose of the public.

WITH INFINITE PRECAUTION.

Silently Pete swayed up the path to the front porch. Now, where wash thash key? He hunted in his pockets. Five minutes later he found it and groped for the keyhole. Ten minutes later he found same, and turned the key in the lock. What a noise it made.

He hoped SHE was asleep!

Cautiously he opened the door, took off his boots, and crept inside. Behind him the door closed with a bang. He nearly collapsed with apprehension. Had that awakened her?

Still no sound from above. His luck must be in to-night.

With boots in hand he slipped upstairs in his stockinged feet. He pushed open the bedroom door, and crept in.

Still no sound from the wife.

He did not turn on the light. Carefully and fearfully he found his way to the side of the bed, undressed in silence, and groped under the pillow for his pyjamas. Then he slid stealthily into bed, trying not to shake it. With a sigh of relief he collapsed on the pillow.

Still no sound from HER. Truly his luck was in.

He lay for a while and listened. Everything was quiet. He could not hear her breathing. What was wrong? He put out his hand and felt. Nothing there. What had happened? Had she run away at last? Then he remembered.

His wife was spending the week-end at Repulse Bay.

WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

MR. CHAMBERLAIN ON CREDIT

PUBLIC DECLARATION BY THE BANKS

MR. NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN URGED CO-OPERATION BETWEEN THE CENTRAL BANKS OF THE WORLD FOR THE CREATION OF A CHEAP MONEY POLICY, WHICH WOULD BE PUBLICLY PROCLAIMED, AT YESTERDAY'S MEETING OF THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE.

London, June 20.

At the Conference to-day, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Chamberlain, speaking in the sub-committee of the monetary commission which is considering immediate measures for dealing with the world trade depression, declared that cheap money was indispensable for trade recovery and urged the banks of world to reveal their money policy for trade and industry.

He recalled that since October, 1929, wholesale commodity prices, expressed in gold, had declined one third and raw material prices from fifty to sixty per cent.

POSITION OF TRADERS.

As long as traders thought prices were going to be still worse they would not embark on business operations. Therefore any action which has the flavour of deflation on the part of the central banks would be extremely injurious.

"We attach importance to the suggestion that the intentions of the banks should be stated so that all the world may know the purpose and the policy which they intend to pursue. We are not to regard a cheap monetary policy as constituting by itself a remedy for all the evils that inflict the world. But cheap money in the financial centres is the indispensable background against which the economic recovery of the world can take place.

Dear money, or even in the present conditions moderately dear money, is a handicap to world recovery.

CO-ORDINATION.

"I want to emphasise the extreme desirability of co-ordination in credit policy between the central banks. If those banks opposite directions or even if pursue policies which lead in they adopt different methods in trying to achieve the same end we shall not secure what we want."

He added that governments should see that their central banks had the powers required to preserve an open credit policy.

GOLD STANDARD.

The Second monetary sub-commission, after some discussion, adopted unanimously the first two points in the United States resolution, namely, "that it is in the interests of all that stability in the international monetary field should be attained as quickly as possible and that gold should be re-established as an international measure of exchange values."

An addition, proposed by Lord Hailsham, that each country should be free to determine the time and the parity at which it should return to the gold standard was also accepted.

SILVER QUESTION.

A sub-committee to deal with the silver question, over which Senator Pittman will preside, was also set up.

PASSIVE ATTITUDE.

Washington, June 20.

Everything points to the United States adopting a passive attitude towards the World Economic Conference until President Roosevelt has developed his domestic recovery programme, aimed at improving general business conditions and relieving unemployment in America.

Meanwhile, the American delegation in London has been instructed not to commit itself without Mr. Roosevelt approval on any policy whatsoever.

A statement emanating from well-informed quarters says that Senator Key Pittman's advocacy of a general twenty-five per cent. gold and silver cover, may be regarded as President Roosevelt's answer to the European clamour for stabilisation of currencies, and is entirely consonant with the President's domestic and international policies.

Senator Pittman's pronouncement is hailed here as an indication that the Conference is tackling the fundamentals which lie behind the present world uneasiness and depression.

PARIS PESSIMISM.

Paris, June 20.

Official quarters here see no immediate way out of the impasse at the World Economic Conference on account of President Roosevelt's attitude on stabilisation.—Reuter.

OFFICE WORKERS ANNOYED

INTOLERABLE NOISE OF LOUD SPEAKER

IMPOSSIBLE FOR CLERKS TO WORK

The annoyance caused to clerks in the Government Statistical Office by a loud speaker radio in the Union Radio Supply Company, 45, Hennessy Road, was the subject of a summons against George Cheung, the master of the Company, before Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Mr. W. T. Lewis, of the Statistical Office, said that the office moved to 18, Johnstone Road on June 4, and for two or three days afterwards the most intolerable nuisance was caused by the broadcast of music and gramophone records by the loud-speaker from defendant's shop. Witness had fifty clerks dealing with figures in the office, and it was quite impossible for them to work. He therefore reported the matter to the S. I. E., who informed the police. He himself had not made any representations to the defendant, but Inspector McLellan warned the defendant about the nuisance on June 6. On June 7 from about 9.30 a.m. to 10.30 a.m. European music was being broadcast in the shop, and from 11.20 a.m. till shortly before noon Chinese records were being broadcast. This period was the worst. Since that date there had been no further trouble.

The defendant stated that the receiving set was not in operation between 9.30 a.m. and 11.30 a.m. but from 11.30 until 2 p.m. The loud speaker had been sent back to them from a theatre to be tested.

RIGHT TIME TO TEST.

Mr. Schofield.—If you want to test your loudspeaker it should be done during other hours. From between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. would be the best time.

Defendant.—Inspector McLellan warned us about the use of the loud speaker, and since then we had not used it.

Mr. Lewis.—I know the annoyance came from defendant's shop, as I sent a clerk there to find out.

Defendant.—The nuisance occurred on June 4 and June 5.

Mr. Schofield.—You admit that the loudspeaker was in use from 11.30 onwards, don't you?

Defendant.—Yes.

Mr. Schofield.—This nuisance has not recurred, but I should like to point out that as you have a Government Office as neighbours, it will be necessary for you to see that no noise comes from your shop during working hours. If testing on a loudspeaker is to be done, it should be done in hours that the office is not working, as it is trying to the clerks. I fine you $20 as I consider the nuisance a serious one.

PO PIU LOTTERY TICKETS

WOMEN CONVICTED FOR POSSESSION

Charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones in Court this morning with the possession of 118 po piu tickets, a woman, So Yee, claimed that they had been "planted" her by a Chinese detective in Hollywood Road. She also complained that the officer held her so firmly by the arm that he left a mark.

The detective, in evidence, said that he arrested her as a result of information. While walking towards the Police Station, two envelopes containing the tickets fell from her trousers. She also carried a rattan basket which contained po piu lottery announcements.

His Worship imposed a fine of $60 or six weeks.

Another woman, who admitted possession of 748 po piu tickets, was fined $600 or three months' gaol.

POTASSIUM CHLORATE FOR BLASTING

Cheap Substitution For Dynamite

Cheung Yau, a magazine watchman, was fined $150 or two months' hard labour for possession of 153 lbs. of potassium chlorate and 60 lbs. of sulphur at Dragon's Back by Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Two others, Cheung Tin and Lau Sau, earth coolies, were each fined $10 or fourteen days hard labour for possession of 25 lbs. of potassium chlorate at the same place.

Sergeant Orem said first defendant was arrested on the hillside, with the other defendants, whom he had engaged to carry the stuff. The third defendant showed the police where the bulk of the stuff had been hidden in the hillside.

Inspector James added that the presumption was that potassium chlorate was much cheaper than dynamite, and was used for blasting, the dynamite being sold for fishing purposes. The second and third defendants were only carriers, the chlorate being issued to them by the first defendant. The value of the stuff was about $27.

First defendant stated that he bought the chemicals from the Kwong Wing Hing shop in Hongkong for blasting boulders. He had a licence for dynamite.

FURTHER REMAND

YOUNG RUSSIAN AND PASS PORT

A further remand of one week, during which time a reply from Shanghai regarding defendant's passport, (is awaited), was granted by Mr. Wynne-Jones in Central Police Court this morning, in the case in which Singatulla Minnigualimoff, a young Russian trader, is charged with entering the Colony without a valid passport.

Detective-Sergeant Mottram, of the Passports Office, said that a letter was sent to the Shanghai authorities last Wednesday, but no reply had been received.

At the last hearing, the defendant stated he had a passport issued by the Chinese Bureau of Foreign Affairs, Shanghai, but it was stolen by Chinese.

YOUNG CHINESE FINED $310

ILLICIT OPIUM AND DIVAN KEEPER

Li Hung, a young learner driver, who was a complainant in the wounding case at the Criminal Sessions yesterday, was fined $310 or three months' hard labour, by Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning on charges of possession of 2.2 taels of illicit opium, and keeping a divan at 154, Des Voeux Road Central, third floor.

Revenue Officer Ward, who made the arrest, stated that two pipes and two lamps were seized. The opium was thrown into the verandah during the raid. Defendant had a previous conviction for being the keeper of a gaming house in December last year.

R. O. Ward explained that the premises were not only a divan but more of a retailer's place.

KING FEISAL IN LONDON

COLOURFUL SCENES IN STATE VISIT

GREETED BY HIS MAJESTY

London, June 20.

King Feisal of Iraq was given a notable reception when he reached England on a State visit to-day.

As his steamer, escorted by four of Britain's fastest destroyers and nine aeroplanes, entered Dover Harbour, a Royal Salute of twenty-one guns was fired.

The King's second son, the Duke of York, with the Iraq Minister, went aboard to greet the king and introduced to him the British suite which has been attached to him for the visit and accompanied him to the special train on which he proceeded to London.

Awaiting the Royal visitor at Victoria Station were King George, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Gloucester, the Prime Minister and other members of the Cabinet, heads of the Services and many other distinguished people who wore either uniform or levee dress.

GRENADIERS PARADE.

The Grenadier Guards, with the King's Colour, formed the Guard of Honour and helped to create an impression of pageantry which has not been equalled in London for some time.

There was a cordial greeting between the two Kings and numerous introductions were made on both sides before the procession of carriages in the first of which sat King Feisal and King George, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Gloucester, proceeded to Buckingham Palace through large crowds which heartily cheered the Royal visitor.—British Wireless.

OPIUM & WINE

MEN, WOMAN AND BOY IN COURT

A Chinese boat woman and boy were charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones in Court this morning with possession of dutiable wine. The boy, it was stated, was given two jars of wine by the woman to take ashore from a ship, with the promise of a meal. The woman was discharged and a fine of $10 or four strokes imposed on the lad.

Remarking that defendant must have known there was a catch in it his Worship imposed a fine of $900 or five months, on a man for possession of opium. Defendant stated he was given the opium to carry and had been offered one dollar.

A fine of $60 or one month was inflicted on another man who admitted having evaded duty on five lbs. of tobacco.

DRASTIC ALTERATIONS IN LOCAL FOOTBALL RULES SUGGESTED

BOWLERS COME INTO THEIR OWN

YORKSHIRE, SURREY AND HANTS WIN EASILY

London, June 20.

Having had their averages ruined by batsmen during the last two or three county cricket programmes, bowlers came into their own in the course of the past three days, and fourteen trundlers individual analysis of note, among the best being P.G.H. Fender's 8 for 29 and Arthur Staples' 7 for 20.

The results provided one or two surprises. Surrey actually beat Essex, who have been carrying all before them, by an innings, and Hampshire, whose record is rather miserable, set about Middlesex and defeated the Lord's men by an innings and 119 runs.

Yorkshire, as usual, took the full complement of points, Gloucester being the victims. Rain so restricted the match between Warwick and Kent that it was impossible to complete an innings apiece and the teams took four points each.

The weather likewise affected Lancashire's game with Glamorgan which ended in the Northerners winning first innings points. Lancashire tried hard to force the issue, declaring at 169 for 3 leaving them 26 ahead on the first innings but rain stopped them from realising their endeavour.

BOWLERS DOMINATE.

Bowlers dominated when Yorkshire met Gloucester. The champions gained an advantage of 48 runs on the first innings, but fared so badly in the second, thanks to Goddard who captured 8 for 77, that Gloucester were set only 238 to win.

Bowes, however, repeated Goddard's achievement and put finis to Gloucester's ambitions by taking 8 for 69 and sending the side back for 135 runs.

Leicester, after securing a lead of nearly 100 runs against Worcester, fared so badly in their second attempt, that they were dismissed for 71, Perks taking 5 for 28, and Worcester, by dint of careful batting managed to hit off the required 169 runs for victory for the loss of eight wickets. It was a thrilling finish to a match of fluctuating fortunes.

HOBBS'S BAD LUCK.

Surrey found a total of 268 perfectly adequate by which to beat Essex, who twice failed at the wicket. Hobbs had bad luck in not registering another century, losing his wicket when 15 runs short.

Brilliant bowling by Gover, (6 for 17) and Fender (8 for 29) proved the undoing of Essex who were sent back for 66 and 102).

A. W. Carr was in batting mood when Notts beat Derby. He carried his bat for 137 and closed the Notts innings at 404 for 4 wickets. Arthur Staples carried on the good work with the ball and Derby were hopelessly outclassed.

B. H. Valentine, whose batting for Kent this year has been a feature, added further to his laurels by taking 164 off the Warwick attack. Kent placed themselves in an unassailable position by scording 403 for 6, but rain put an end to the match after Warwick had replied with 67 for 2.

LINDRUM THE NEW CHAMPION.

Walter Lindrum, of Australia, won the English Professional Billiards Championship, at Dorland Hall, defeating J. Davis, the holder, by 694 points. Lindrum outplayed his opponent at both stages. In the first he scored 883 against Davis' 725, and with a lead of 337 he played so well at night that Davis never got within striking distance. Final scores: Lindrum, 21,815; Davis, 21,121.

Policeman Beats Bowls Finalist

The falling of the mighty seems to have started in the lawn bowls championship, for following the recent elimination from the tournament of L. A. Gutierrez, the present holder, another veteran bowler, J. C. Brown, has succumbed.

A former finalist, J. C. Brown was surprisingly beaten by R. Ellis of the Police R. C. when the pair met on the Kowloon C. C. green yesterday afternoon, the Happy Valley representative winning by 21 shots to 15 after a close and exciting match, which produced bowls of a very high standard.

Ellis was uncanny with his bowling and although Brown was not in any way off form, the Dock player was unable to cope with his opponent, and but for his experience would have been beaten by a much larger margin. Ellis took the lead at 7-2 on the seventh head but when on the ninth Brown scored a four, he drew level and then went ahead of his antagonist.

On the 13th head the Kowloon Dock player was leading by 12 shots to seven but at the 21st head the scores were even at 15 all.

Always bowling accurately Ellis scored two singles and a two to make the score 19-15 in his favour at the conclusion of the 24th head. He then won by scoring two singles in succession.

A. S. Gomes v. R. Hall.

A. S. Gomes of the Club de Recreio met R. Hall of the Kowloon Bowling Green on an adjoining green and won by 21 shots to 15 on the 21st head.

The Portuguese player established an early lead by making the score 9-1 in his favour on the 8th head but Hall showed better form and drew level at 14-14 on the 18th. Gomes, by scoring a two on the 19th and then a four, made the total 20-14. He scored the necessary shot for victory on the 21st head.

The match between A. M. Holland and J. S. Logan was postponed.

L. E. Lammert failed to appear for his match against A. Hyde Lay.

HONGKONG DRAW WITH STRAGGLERS

MATCH RUINED BY RAIN

(Our Own Correspondent).

London, June 20.

Rain, which affected numbers of county cricket matches, came to wash out the match between the Hongkong cricketers and Somerset Stragglers at Taunton to-day, the game being abandoned during the afternoon after the Stragglers had, in their second innings, scored 169 for 3.

On a rather tricky wicket, the Stragglers, who opened their second innings this morning with a lead of 13, batted cautiously and at the lunch interval had scored only 43 runs, but had the whole of their wickets intact.

After lunch, the batsmen brightened up considerably, and the Hongkong bowlers could make little impression.

The Stragglers remained at the wicket until tea when they closed their innings at 169 for 3.

Heavy rain fell immediately afterwards and made a continuance of the match out of the question, the game being abandoned from this stage.

GOLF.

CHAMPIONS FALL BY WAYSIDE

EDWARD KYLE WINS AGAIN

London, June 20.

There were many surprises in the second round of the English Amateur Golf Championship at Hoylake to-day.

Williams Sutton, a former English champion was beaten by Jones of St. Helens at the nineteenth hole, and John Wollam, present holder fell to Harry Bentley of Lancashire and ex-French champion.

Leonard Crawley, another ex-English champion was beaten by Sam McKinlay, a Glasgow journalist by 3 and 2 and Eric Fiddian, another ex-Champion lost to Ivor Thomas of Lancashire 3 and 1.

The Shanghai representative, J. W. Harrison lost to J. C. Cowley of Hallowes by 3 and 2.

Edward Kyle, the Singapore player advanced a further stage, when in the third round he beat S. Roberts of Prestatyn by 2 and 1.—Reuter.

In the other league match the Chinese Bathing Club defeated the University Team by four goals to one. The score at half time was 2-1. The four goals were scored by Wong Yat-hung, Yeung Wei-lim, and Tong Po-cheung, who bagged two.

BETTER MILITARY REPRESENTATION

The following amendments to the rules of the Hongkong Football Association and the Hongkong Football League will be presented for discussion and approval at the annual general meeting of the Football Association on July 14 at the Sports Club.

The proposer is Captain C. E. Elliot-Heywood and the seconder Captain F. R. Williams, both of the Army.

NO LEAGUE TENNIS.

COURTS IN A SODDEN CONDITION.

After the heavy rain which fell in the morning, local tennis courts were not in fit condition for League tennis yesterday afternoon. Five matches were scheduled to be played off in the "B" division of the League, but all had to postponed.

Local F.A., Demand An Explanation

ST. JOSEPH'S & FARCICAL GAME

At a meeting of the Council of the Hongkong Football Association last evening, a letter was received from Capt. C. E. Elliott-Heywood complaining that according to the newspaper reports the end of the season match between St. Joseph's and the South China Athletic had been a farce and that an explanation should be forthcoming.

Capt. Elliott-Heywood stated that apparently the game had been a farce from beginning to end, and the Association had been made to appear ridiculous in consequence thereof. He pointed out that the South China Athletic had apparently gone to the trouble of turning out their full team, which was what the Association expected of them. St. Joseph's had, however, treated the matter lightly and it was distinctly unfair to other clubs in the league.

The chairman (Major C. M. Manners) the game was certainly a farce. Only five of St. Joseph's 1st XI players turned out for the game.

Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall enquired whether an explanation had been forthcoming and the chairman replied that none had been received to his knowledge.

Mr. T. Mitchell pointed out that many of the St. Joseph's team were unable to get away in time for the game. They had put out the best team possible, under the circumstances.

Mr. J. Ralston referred to the fact that they had played one unregistered player and were therefore guilty of misconduct.

EXPLANATION ASKED.

Hon. Mr. Kotewall suggested that they write asking the St. Joseph's Club for an explanation of their conduct, a motion which was seconded by Capt. F. R. Williams.

As an amendment, Mr. Mitchell moved that as the season was now over, and in view of the difficulty the St. Joseph's Club experienced in getting a side together at all, the matter be allowed to drop.

The amendment was put to the meeting and defeated and the motion was carried.

Apologies for absence were received from Capt. G. C. Cooper and Mr. J. S. Logan.

The date of the annual meeting of the Association was fixed to take place at the Sports Club on Friday, July 14, at 5.30 p.m.

Mr. Y. K. Mok was elected representative of the Association on the Children's Playgrounds Association Executive Committee, and Messrs. Lowe, Bingham and Matthews were elected auditors.

MUI TSAI CASE

FAILURE TO NOTIFY NEW ADDRESS

Appearing on behalf of Wong-Mong-shan, summoned for failing to notify the S.C.A. of her change of address and failing to pay wages to her registered mui tsai, at the Central Magistracy this morning, Mr. J. B. Prentis pleaded guilty to a technical offence.

Mr. Prentis said that the mui tsai was a clanswoman of defendant. He did not know exactly what relationship it was in English, but defendant was a step-daughter of the mui tsai's aunt. It was something similar to a first cousin.

The mui tsai had been in the custody of defendant for about five years, but had not always been in the Colony. When defendant came into the Colony, she went to register defendant and was handed two cards, which she failed to understand, not knowing how to read. She therefore failed to realize that from time to time she should notify her change of address. She did not realize the offence. She had moved three times.

On the question of wages, the defendant had paid the mui tsai money from time to time, and whenever the mui tsai wanted money she asked for it and was usually given the money.

Inspector H. W. Fraser said the girl was a registered mui tsai. She reported on June 8 that she had been assaulted by her employer, who threw the contents of a spittoon over her. Inquiries were made, and it was found that the girl had not been visited, as the defendant had changed her address. It was also found that the girl had not been paid her wages. She was entitled to two years' wages at $1 per month, and to another one year and 25 days' wages at $1.50 a month, the total being $43.25. The girl had a cane mark on the right cheek, which she said had been caused by her employer striking her. From all appearances, however, the girl had been well nourished.

Mr. Schofield ordered defendant to pay to the S.C.A. on behalf of the girl the arrears in her wages, and also fined her $20 on each summons.

S. I. Fraser remarked that change of address must be notified to the S.C.A., as 300 or 400 girls could not yet be traced.

CHOPPER ATTACK BY HUSBAND.

MAN GETS LIGHT TERM AT SESSIONS

A chopper attack by an infuriated Chinese who told the court that his victim was in bed with his wife, was related at the trial of the husband at the Criminal Sessions yesterday. The Puisne Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindsell, presided.

Lam Tai-yung, alias Lam Kan, of 3, Gilman's Bazaar, pleaded not guilty to wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm, Li Kwok Hung, known as Li Hung, of 154, Des Voeux Road Central, at the former address on April 22. He also entered a similar plea on a charge of malicious and unlawful wounding.

Mr. R. H. Lim, instructed by Mr H. C. Lee appeared for accused, and Mr. H. K. Holmes, Crown Solicitor, prosecuted.

The Jury consisted of Messrs. F. F. Duckworth, A. H. Harbord, G. Duncan, jnr., G. R. Payne, S. Feldman, Yeung Kwong-chui, B. C. Field.

Former Friends.

Setting out the facts of the case, Mr. Holmes said the three persons chiefly concerned were the accused, the wounded man, and the former's wife, who was the "woman in the case." By this phrase he did not wish to make insinuations against the woman, but she was involved, and how far she was involved would be a matter for the jury to determine.

Li Hung and accused were formerly fokis together in an opium business which was apparently illicit because it was raided at the beginning of this year. The two men remained acquainted however, after their business relations ceased. Accused, his wife, and a small boy who was related to them, lived in a front cubicle at 3, Gilman's Bazaar, and on April 21, the husband returned by the night boat from Macao where he had spent some days. He visited friends on his arrival in Hongkong and it was not until 3 a.m. that he returned home.

Jealous Husband.

According to his own statement, accused discovered Li Hung in bed with his wife, the small boy also being in the cubicle. Li Hung would seek to give an innocent explanation of his presence there and would say that the woman had sent for him because he was going back to the country and she wanted him to take a message to her mother.

Without doubt, Lam Kan was jealous of his wife and suspected her, and his account of what followed was probably an honest account. He would say that he heard his wife telling Li Hung that her husband had not returned from the country, and that she added rather a disparaging nickname.

Accused became very angry and, going quietly down to the kitchen, he obtained two choppers and returned to the cubicle. After an unsuccessful attempt to scale the partition he forced open the door and fell upon Li Hung with a chopper in each hand, inflicting several wounds on his head. The wife intervened and managed to hold her husband while the wounded man ran into the street but accused broke away, and continued and arrested by a police reservist. the pursuit until he was stopped

A Late Call.

In a statement made to the police, continued Mr. Holmes, accused had said that he had been married for several years and had come to Hongkong the previous year. Describing the events of the early morning he had said:—"I walked up the stairs quietly and stood listening on the stairs for half an hour. I heard voices and laughing." He added that he had persuaded a man who wore wooden shoes to walk up the stairs with him so that his wife would be unable to recognise his tread. After the attack and the chase, he returned to the house with the policeman and saw Li Hung coming out of the house with some clothing under his arm. The injured man fell down with a cry that he was dying.

Dr. G. H. Thomas, of the Government Civil Hospital, said Li Hung had extensive though not very serious wounds on his head when admitted to the hospital.

In the witness box, Li Hung said he was asked to call at the house by Lam's wife but he did not recall the invitation until some hours after it was given and it was 2 a.m. when he got there. He was lying on the opium bed and the woman was lying on the other bed when accused burst into the room with a chopper in each hand and attacked him with a shout of:—"One of us must die!"

Chan Ying-pan, police reservist said he was on duty when he met a man covered with blood running down Aberdeen Street, chased by accused who was armed with two choppers.

Threat To Kill.

Formal evidence was given by a Chinese constable, the owner of the choppers, Sub-Inspector Chester-Wood, and the Central Magistracy interpreter.

The boy who lived with accused and his wife, testified that Li Hung had threatened to kill him if he spoke of his visit to the cubicle in the husband's absence.

Mr. Lim said he had just been informed by the Crown Solicitor that he was not calling the wife to give evidence.

The Judge: They cannot. Surely you must have realised from the form of Indictment that she could not be called?

Mr. Lim then made a special application for the wife to be called and said she had previously given evidence.

Mr. Holmes: I certainly could not call the wife now because there is no allegation that he (accused) struck her. It has been laid down quite recently that the Crown cannot be forced to call any witness. It is not because I don't want the woman to be called that I object—I have no objection to my friend taking any advantage of her presence here, that he could. He can call her himself if he likes.

The Judge: I hold, Mr. Lim, that the Crown cannot be compelled, even on your application, to put the wife into the witness box.

The Silent Wife.

The case for the Crown being concluded, Mr. Lim said that he wished to submit that there was no case to go before a jury. The scene that accused witnessed in the cubicle was one which in law justified the wife killing Li Hung because the suggestion of the defence was that Li Hung was about to commit a crime on her. It did not matter in such circumstances whether it was the wife or the husband who did the killing and in this case it did not go so far as that. There was no evidence that the wife was a consenting party.

The Judge: The implication from the evidence before the court was that she made no outcry. I hold that there is a case to go before the Jury.

Lost Control.

The accused then entered the witness box and confirmed the previous statement made by him, outlined in Mr. Holmes' opening. He said that when he burst into the cubicle he lost control of himself and struck at Li Hung with the choppers.

After considerable pressing, accused admitted that he waited on the stairs because he suspected there was a love affair between his wife and the visitor. He had once before discovered them together and had struck his wife on that occasion.

Mr. Lim said he wished to call his wife, and there was a stir in the court when she made her way to the box.

In a scarcely audible voice she stated that she sent for Li Hung to give him a message for her mother and when she let him in at 2 a.m. she told him this message and then lay down on her bed. He lay down on the other bed and witness went to sleep. As far as she remembered, nothing unusual happened.

When pressed witness recalled that there was a little fighting.

The Judge: Nothing unusual! Fighting and choppers in the middle of the night!

Witness said she awoke to find the men fighting but she did not know why they were fighting.

In reply to Mr. Holmes she repeated that she could not tell what happened because she was asleep.

In his address to the jury, Mr. Lim said that if not justified, accused's actions were excusable owing to the state of mind he was in at the time.

Summing Up.

Summing up his Lordship said:—"You will realise that the wounding is admitted. The whole crux of the situation is the motive that actuated prisoner. Mr. Lim has made a suggestion that he thought his wife was going to be ravished. I put it to you that that suggestion is utterly improbable. . . . Even if it was so, the Jury would have to be satisfied that it was necessary for him (prisoner) to get choppers to stop such a crime. . . . The real motive I suggest was that he believed they were committing adultery together. . . . If you think prisoner thought adultery was being committed and lost his head as a reasonable man might, you should find him guilty of the lesser offence."

After a short retirement, the Jury announced a unanimous verdict of "guilty" on the lesser offence, viz., wounding maliciously; and "not guilty" on the charge of wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm.

His Lordship said he was satisfied that accused had great provocation, but his action was not justified in law and he had assistance to hand. The sentence of the court was three months' hard labour, the commencement of the period to date from April 22, the date of the offence.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Occasionally at a tournament a freak hand will be dealt which will produce a lot of fireworks. One of the most unusually freakish hands that I have seen for a long time is the following hand which was dealt at a bridge tournament in Cleveland recently.

Looking the hand over, you will find that North and South can make six trump, six diamonds or six clubs, while East and West can make six spades or six hearts. You can imagine the great variation of bidding, and it was unusual to note that top score on the hand was received by a pair who bid for the least number of tricks.

The Bidding

South, the dealer, opened the bidding with one club. West overcalled with one heart. Personally, in the constructive one over one system, I would not open South's hand in this manner, and if South had opened with one club, I would make a negative double with the West hand. It is an ideal hand for such a double as it has both spades and hearts.

However, as the bidding actually occurred, North then bid three diamonds. East bid three hearts and South bid three no trump.

	♠6-3 ♥2 ♦A-Q-J-9-7-2 ♣A-K-8-2
♠K-Q-10-4 ♥A-Q-10-9-8-3 ♦8-6-5 ♣None	NORTH WEST EAST Dealer SOUTH	♠J-9-5-7-5-2 ♥7-6-5-4 ♦None ♣9-6-4
	♠A ♥K-J ♦K-10-4-3 ♣Q-J-10-7-5-3 12

West bid four spades, North and East passed, and South bid four no trump, which West doubled and North redoubled.

A small heart was opened and the declarer made seven odd. As his side was vulnerable, he scored 400 each for the three overtricks, 560 for the four no trump doubled and redoubled, and 500 for the vulnerable game, for a total of 2260 points.

It is rather difficult to give the correct bidding in a freak hand from both sides, as you always have the human equation to deal with. However, I believe it should be along the following lines: South should pass, West should bid one heart. North and South are vulnerable and North can make an overcall of two diamonds.

Remember that when vulnerable an overcall guarantees at least a five-card suit and a pretty good hand. East, having normal support for his partner and a void in diamonds, is justified in making a constructive response of two hearts.

South should support his partner's suit by bidding three diamonds, as this is the real safety of the hand. West will then show his second suit by bidding three spades.

North can bid four diamonds—remember his first bid showed a five-card suit, therefore his second bid must show it to be either a six-card suit or a fairly solid one. East will now support spades to four.

South can bid five clubs and West five hearts. North will bid six clubs and East six spades, and now South can bid six no trump.

West should not double, North will pass and East might be justified in trying for a sacrifice by bidding seven spades, as his side is not vulnerable.

DARLING FOOL

Dangerous talk this, for pretty, poor, proud 16. Dangerous whispers for the small ears of Kay O'Dare who wasn't a "grind," who wasn't clever at her looks, whose fortune was in her hyacinthine orbs and her small twinkling feet.

She said slowly, "You're kidding me, Chester. I couldn't—I mean I wouldn't get over—"

He interrupted. "Baby, you're the money. What I mean, you could knock 'em silly in the front rows. I've got a friend in show business—man, like me gets around, you know—"

The voice purred on, softly, insinuatingly. Kay thought of Miss Mahon who was head of the English department, whose bitter, edged tone had cut into her consciousness that day.

"Miss O'Dare's notebook? But I didn't know Miss O'Dare had a notebook."

Kay had flushed scarlet, had stammered, hating herself, the teacher, everything. Was it her fault she wasn't brainy? Not everyone could be! Well, she'd show them all some day, all these old cats and foxes all over town. She'd show them what Kay O'Dare could do. They'd see her name up in lights, they would. They'd boast, primming their lips, "Oh, yes, I knew her, years ago—"

She'd cut them when she passed them in the street. She could see a high-powered car whirring down a glittering avenue—herself, slim, long-legged, wrapped in furs—chinchilla, maybe. A man in livery would slip down from the seat, rush around to hand her out. Some nosey woman in blue serge would buzz up to her. "Aren't you little Kay O'Dare?"

Kay would draw herself up slowly and disdainfully, answering her, "You seem to have the advantage of me!" Miss Mahon (for it would be Miss Mahon) would slip away, quite crestfallen.

"What's on your mind, sweetness?"

* * *

She came back to earth, to the shimmer of the June afternoon, to Chester, moist but dapper, beside her.

"I—I've got to be running along. My Mother will be wondering—"

"Aw, sweetness, don't be mean! Come on, we'll have a snack out at that place on the River Road. I've got the bus down at the garage."

Her eyes were wide, frightened. "I can't, honestly!" Was that Monnie she saw walking along on the other side of the street?

"We could dance, baby. Honest, I'm dying to dance with you Bet you're a honey at it, aren't you?"

If it was Monnie, she was lost. She said in a madness of haste, "I'll meet you at 8:30 at the corner of Main and Arverne—if I can. Good-by."

She fairly ran.

Of course she wouldn't go to meet him, she assured herself. That was just to get rid of him. She wouldn't dare to go out to one of those night places. Chester didn't know it—she had, of course, pretended to be more sophisticated than she was—but Kay had never been out after sundown with a man. Boys had taken her to parties but usually Bill had called for her afterward.

She wouldn't go. Chester would be angry, would call her a "bum sport." She couldn't help it. And if he left Belvedere that night, as he had said he would, perhaps she'd never see him again. She felt a pang. Chester who held out these brave promises of the golden life for her in the big city!

Her mother met her with a worried expression. "Kay, someone's been calling you from the school. The office. You're to call back."

The voice of the principal's secretary answered her. "Miss O'Dare? Oh, yes, Mr. Bellamy particularly wants to see you before class to-morrow. Stop in, will you."

She hung up, with hands that shook a little. So she had flunked. That was what it meant! She couldn't bear it—couldn't stand the pity and the sneers. She'd have to do something to get away. Chester!

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Setting out on the trail of a Hollywood activity record, Victor Jory stepped straight from a featured role in "The Infernal Machine" to an important part in "Broadway Bad". He joined Joan Blondell, Ricardo Cortez, Ginger Rogers, Adrienne Ames, "Allen Vincent and others in the cast of this production.

Jory has yet to enjoy a day off since joining the films. His first picture was "Second Hand Wife", and he went from that to "Handle With Care", did a part in the all-star production "State Fair," and then joined the cast of "The Infernal Machine". Five minutes after he completed his role in that picture he went to an adjacent stage to appear in "Broadway Bad".

Others in the cast of "Broadway Bad," which is now showing at the King's Theatre, include Margaret Seddon and Donald Crisp. Sidney Lanfield directed the dramatic romance for Fox.

"Clear All Wires"

A peregrinating journalist with the nerve of a Bengal tiger, complications in Moscow with the secret police, too many women and thrills galore that are twisted into laughs mark the latest stage hit to reach the screen, "Clear All Wires," now playing at the Queen's Theatre. With Lee Tracy as the irresponsible and irrepressible newspaper correspondent, Benita Hume, Una Merkel and James Gleason heading an excellent cast, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmization of the Broadway comedy hit depicts the trials and tribulations of the fast-talking hero.

Tracy steals his employer's chorus girl and takes her from Paris to Moscow. He gets fired. He invades the Red Army. He tries to "frame" a shooting in order to register a scoop and get his job back. He falls into the hands of the Russian secret police. He lets himself be captured by Riffs. He tries to get rid of dancers and blonde sirens who storm the citadel of his love in vain. And finally the only sensible woman in the lot, played by Benita Hume, marries him and reforms him—for the time being at least.

James Gleason scores as Tracy's amusing assistant. An excellent supporting cast includes Alan Edwards, Eugene Sigaloff, Ari Kutai, C. Henry Gordon, Lya Lys, Lawrence Grant, John Melvin, and Guy Isher.

"Tell Me To-night"

The heroine of "Tell Me To-night" is an exceedingly pretty Continental actress, Magda Schneider. Although only nineteen years of age she is a very well-known artist, having appeared in several successful plays and popular German films. It is interesting to note that prior to her appearance in the British film version of "Tell Me To-night" Magda Schneider could not speak one word of English, yet in this film her enunciation is excellent. She is a most natural actress, putting over her part of the saucy heroine, with whom the great singer, Ferraro, is in love, with a pertness that is fascinating in the extreme.

Dark-haired and brown-eyed; possessor of flashing white teeth, an infectious smile and saucy dimples, Magda Schneider is destined to become exceedingly popular with British filmgoers. "Tell Me To-night" is having its final run at the Central Theatre to-day, an astonishing mixture of romance, comedy and singing, set against a background of Switzerland, this picture has never been bettered.

"Fast Workers"

The most changed man in Hollywood to-day is John Gilbert.

To the film public's eye Gilbert suggests the princely trappings of "The Merry Widow" and the military nattiness of "The Big Parade."

Possibly that illusion will never fade for those who are loyal to the past. But John has laid that splendour in mothballs, rolled up his sleeves and donned a pair of overalls.

Thus he will be seen in his new picture, "Fast Workers," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer thriller of skyscraper construction directed by Tod Browning, that opens to-day at the Queen's.

As the title suggests, it is a story of high building adventure. John Gilbert, who was "Bardelys, the Magnificent," becomes "Gunner" Smith, a wielder of the trip-hammer. His throne is a precarious perch high up on the girders of a soaring steel skeleton.

Remanded from yesterday, Wan So, charged with the larceny of a silver handled knife, a silver fork and a silver spoon from the Officers Mess at the Mt. Austin Barracks, appeared before Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, and was bound over in $50 to be of good behaviour for one year.

Addressing defendant's mother, Mr. Schofield said that if she had any complaints to make against her son, she should bring her son to the court.

In binding over the defendant, Mr. Schofield remarked that if he was caught thieving again, he would not only be punished for the second offence, but also for the present offence.

THE DIFFICULTY WITH DOGS

TRY TO FREE THEMSELVES FROM MUZZLE

Pleading guilty before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Police Court this morning to a summons for allowing his dog abroad without a muzzle, Mr. N. B. Maher stated that he went out for a walk with his three dogs, all muzzled. While playing about one of the muzzles became detached.

The Magistrate—It is very difficult, I agree. I have a dog myself and he spends half the time trying to get his muzzle off. Fined five dollars.

Similar fines were imposed on Mr. H. A. Lammert and Mr. D. J. Mackie. Answering on behalf of his wife, Mr. T. G. Paterson said the dog had since died of poisoning, some body having given it a bamboo pill. A fine of $5 was imposed.

Pleading not guilty to a similar summons, a Chinese contended he had a dog but it was not a white dog as stated in the summons.

The Magistrate—How did you know defendant was the owner?

Constable—The dog ran into the house.

His Worship—I refuse to accept that as evidence. A dog run into any house. If a dog runs into my garden am I to be summoned? Defendant is discharged.

NEW YORK STOCK UNCERTAINTY

IRREGULALARITY LIKELY TO CONTINUE

The following cable was received this morning from Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, New York:

"Stock market is off on realizing and exchange uncertainty. Further irregularity is likely to be followed by a resumption of the rise in grain prices. Local traders took profits to-day in wheat and corn as the weather map indicated showers in the West and Southwest to-night. Crop news and trading returns very bullish. Corn has a bad start and it looks like the long side would prove profitable this year. Cotton tendency towards profit-taking was accentuated by the reaction in stocks.

"Doubt as to the success of the Government's Cotton Curtailment plan is becoming a market factor but inflationary power remains. Inclination of buyers to await reactions is more noticeable."
